Here's an example of a case often found in small claims courts: Tenants refuse to pay damages that are more than a security deposit The tenant fails to pay the rent or the Landlord attempts to evict the tenant the Tenant moves and the landlord refuses to refund the security deposit The failure of a trader to handle damaged merchandise The borrower refuses to make payments for damage to the dry cleaning business of the loan or loses the goods and refuses to pay damages or loses unnecessary repairs or work done on the car by the mechanic How does the defendant know the case? After the plaintiff makes the claim, the trial judge will serve the defendant with a copy of the claim (including sworn statements) and a summons (with the date and time of the trial) to appear in court. The defendant has 30 days to respond or answer the charges. What is default rating and why is it bad? When the defendant fails to appear in court or respond to a charge, the court may deliver a verdict of default. If a default judgment is entered, the plaintiff is given the amount requested in the claim along with the court costs. If the plaintiff asks for non-monetary damages (such as property), the court must conduct a separate hearing to determine the dollar amount of the damages. The defendant has a 30-day window to respond to the plaintiff's claims. If the defendant fails to respond, the defendant defaults. Procedures for hearings in several districts, courts require both parties to attempt to resolve the case through mediation before the court will hear the case (if mediation is unsuccessful). Mediation is a way for both parties to meet with independent third parties who can evaluate the case and try to reach a resolution that can be agreed upon by both parties. Even if mediation is successful, plaintiffs can still seek to recover court costs. If mediation does not resolve the claim, the case will proceed to trial. The court will hear the evidence and give for plaintiffs and defendants to introduce their evidence (and allow each party to comment on evidence introduced by the other party). When all parties presenting their evidence, the court will make a decision. The judge may indemnify the plaintiff, defendant, or both depending on the facts of the case. The court has several options if the plaintiff does not appear in court. The court may allow the defendant to put on his evidence and then issue a decision without a hearing from the plaintiff. The court can proceed with the case until a later date to decide the case. If the defendant does not demonstrate at the hearing, the court has the authority to give a verdict of default against the defendant. The name comes from the fact that because the defendant did not show, the plaintiff won the case by default. It is highly recommended that you attend the hearing whether you are a plaintiff or a defendant (regardless of whether you believe the case is strong or weak). Preparing for the Trial The following steps are recommended to prepare for the trial: Make sure you have a copy of all the documents you need for your case. Prepare a copy to provide to the opposing party and the court. Talk to all the witnesses you want to call to support your case. You must confirm that they are available and willing to appear on the hearing date. If the witness will not agree to appear, you need to call them. If you need additional documents for your case, you can issue a subpoena for the document to obtain documents from another party. A subpoena is a court order for a person or document to appear at a certain time and date to testify or produce evidence. You can obtain a subpoena from the Clerk of Whitfield County for a Magistrate's Court. Whitfield County Court Location Court judge for Whitfield County is located at: P.O. Box 386 Dalton, GA 30722 The magistrate judge is Chief Judge Haynes Henton Townsend. The phone number for the court is: 706-278-5052. Fax number is 706-278-8810. How do I appeal the verdict? If you are unhappy with the court's decision (and generally at least one party, sometimes both, is dissatisfied with the ruling), the party may appeal (or ask the higher court to review the judgment). The appeal will be heard in state court or over Whitfield County. On appeal, either party can request a jury trial (something you can't have at the judge's court level). The appeal must be lodged within 30 days of the judge's decision. Can the Defendant sue the Plaintiff? Defendants can sue the plaintiff (this is called a counter-lawsuit). The defendant may file this against the plaintiff's original claim if the defendant's claim relates to the plaintiff's initial claim and the amount requested by the defendant is less than $15,000. The defendant's counter-lawsuit at the same time and date as the plaintiff's original claim. Whitfield County Small Claims Court Claims Court also called Court in Whitfield County.
