The Sonbar and subwoofer should connect automatically when they turn on, making enjoying your entertainment super easy. If for some reason they don't do that, you can connect manually just as easily. Note: The Subwoofer is automatically turned on when you plug in the power code, and it is configured to concatenate with the included sound only. Connect the power cords for the sonbar and the subworfer at the back of each, and then plug both into a wall outlet. Turn the Sonbar on, and the subwoofer should start connecting automatically. When the subwoofer is fully connected, the led indicator links the subwoofer stops blinking and glitter continuously. If the Azure ruling doesn't stop blinking, the process has failed. If at any point you need to pair the subwoofer manually, such as when the sonbar or subwoofer were services or replaced, or after factory to restore the sonbar, or if automatic connections don't work for any reason, then recounting them manually is easy. Connect the power cords for the sonbar and the subworfer at the back of each, and then plug both into a wall outlet. Use a pointed object to press the SEVEN ID button on the back of the subwoofer. Continue keeping till STANDBY turns and LINK (Blue Led) balink quickly. While the sonbar is extinguished, press and hold Mute on the remote control. Note: Some sonbar templates have a SET ID button on the sound that can be used instead. Otherwise the remote is required to make SEVEN ID. If the Mute button doesn't cause SET ID to occur, try keeping the Button Up instead. If neither of these tasks, consult your sonbar user's manuals for instructions. Continue holding until ID SETH appears on the sonbar display. To finalize the connection, turn on the sonbar while the blue subwoofer directs blinks. The main unit and the subwoofer are currently connected and the blue LED should be solid. If the blue led out is still blinking, the process has failed. Close the sonbar and start again in step 2.
