Canada - Coast Map Canada coast only map. Canada - Provinces are sketched and tagged in this map. Canada - Capitals played the Capitals are played. Canada - Capitals played the Capitals are played in this map. Canada - Capitals it has played and provinces tagged This exploration is for all ages after the colorful smilies show. You can color a Canada map with your whole family together! 1st through 4th grades through 8th grades 9 through 12th Canada exploration map is a geography lesson from our Canadian history and supplement geography. I've had so many Canadian homeschoolers request a version for them that i've created one. Canada's history is rich and interesting, and the land, culture and people are diverse and beautiful. For non-Canadians, there is also a more basic country study in Canada in Unit 2-18. Layers of Learning has explorations, experiments, expeditions and printables in every unit of this family-friendly curriculum. Learn more about Learning Layers. Canada has a lot of forests, lots of meadows, lots of hills and a lot, a lot of north. But did you know that Canada's southernmost point, Middle Island, Lake Erie, Ontario, is at the same latitude as northern California and southern France? Step 1: Research Library Before you start the map, read a book or two about Canada. Here are some suggestions, but if you can't find them, search the library about Canada. The colored smilies above each book tell you what age level they are recommended for. As Amazon affiliates, the featured books and products below kick back a small percentage of purchase for us. It does not affect your cost and helps us run our website. Thank! by Michael Ulmer de Vivien Bowers by Bobbi Kalman Step 2: Canada Map You only need crayons, a permanent black pen, and printable map of Canada. Click on the Canada map to print learn all about Canada and use this printable map from Canada to record what you'll learn. And here are a few things to label with the help of a student atlas: Each of the provinces and territoriesIn each of territoriesIn each of territoriesIn each of territoriesIn each OceanBay of FundyGulf of St LawrenceLabradord SeaBeaufort SeaVancouver IslandVictoria IslandBaffin Island Step 3: Show what you know using an empty map of Canada, ask someone to tell each of the locations in the list while trying to point them on the map without looking to what Tagged. Additional Layers Extra Layers are additional tasks that you can do or tangents that you can remove. You'll find them in the side bars of each learning unit. They are optional, so just choose what you for you. The word Canada comes from an iridois word, kanata, which means village. It was the word the Indians used to guide the early explorers to their villages. Captain Arthur Roy Brown was a Canadian pilot during World War I. Learning the provinces and where they fit into canada's geography is something every child ultimately learns. Help them along with this fantastic printable map puzzle. We're not going to lie, cutting everything nice will take a little bit of elbow grease on the mom/carer/teacher party, but what you'll end up with is a great game and tool that costs little to put together and can be taken out and played with again and again. What you need: You do it: 1. Print out Canada's printable puzzle map (it's 4 pages). There is also a version of Canada Printable Puzzle Map without provincial name and territory (it's 4 pages too). 2. Using scissors, cut every province and every capital. 3. Glue everything to the cardboard (I used a stick of glue). 4. With the craft knife, carefully cut each province and capital out of cardboard. 5. Mount each capital on a push-pin (you can use tape or cue poster to keep it in place). That's it! Your map is ready to play. Younger children can assemble the puzzle as they read the name of each provincial capital should go (a reference atlas can be at hand). And for a real challenge, mix up provincial capitals and see how long it takes children to place them in their appropriate places (use a timer!). And those with very keen observation skills will have fun looking at provincial flags and match the patterns on the flags with the weak patterns on the flags with the weak patterns on each province.
