Discover more destiny 2: Abandoned Guides Below One of the great new features of Destiny 2: Forsaken is a bit of nostalgia. Specifically a return to the infamous bounty of Destiny 1's expansion of the House of Wolves, which instructed players to track down some of the most sought-after fallen in the solar system after their rebellion against Queen Mara Sov of the Awakened. In Forsaken, this idea has been expanded and reworked because players now have many reasons to revisit Lost Sectors. The spider wants some of the most infamous fugitives from the prison of elders to be shot, and it has plenty of equipment and glow with which to pay guards who will risk life and members to do the job. It's pretty easy, too. Just load, clear a lost area and pop a super on the sought-after bastard who happens to be a massive ball sponge. What lost area do you hit though? Although finding them is pretty easy thanks to a map, memorizing the names of the 38 lost areas could be a bit taxing on ol' gray matter. Fortunately, I have a list organized here for you. Just hit CTRL-F, find your lost area and resume the hunt. If you need the larger map, just click to embiggen or browse the links below to the YouTube guides on how to find the entry. He is the planetary salesman of the Tangled Coast, and a powerful but ruthless ally of the Reef Awakens and guardians of the Last City. He helped the Guardians track down the despised barons and end his brother's rival syndicate, known as Kell's Scourge. Biography[edit] The Shore's Only Law[edit] The Spider, Leader of the Spider's Syndicate The Spider was born in the House of Wolves, but as he grew up, he quickly came to see the House as a bad investment. Leaving the House of Wolves, the spider eventually arrived on the tangled coast and established himself as the leader of a large union. He amassed a large and loyal clientele of fallen bodyguards, executors and independent agents through his generous Aether payment style, which included ongoing payments if one of his employees was injured on the job. The spider rule was helped by the purchase of a Transmat system that covered its entire territory of the Hunter Olu Alderdice. During the exchange, the sly keeper offered the arsenic spider lipstick as well, but he noted that he looked much better on it. When she offered her hand to shake hands on their agreement, the spider began to reach out, but quickly stopped and scrutinized her before removing her hand, a decision she applauded as wise. The spider's reign was not without its difficulties, as its brother and partner Siviks was outraged at the spider's conduct and its fascination with human artifacts. When Siviks moved against him, the spider had his brother captured and brought him before him, offended that his hospitality and fraternal ties had been betrayed. He offered his brother a chance to apologize, but Siviks simply spit in his face and laugh. The Spider ordered him to be handed over to the Awakened and sentenced to the Prison of the Elders. As his brother was dragged away, he accused the spider of being worse than the rest of the Fallen because of his ties to humanity, but the spider simply taunted. However, once his associates had left, the spider looked with regret where his brother had stood once before sighing and returning to business. Before the outbreak of the Taken War, Queen Mara Sov escaped the city dreaming and entered into an agreement with the spider to protect the Watchtower and, in return, turned a blind eye to her businesses. The spider accepted this agreement and continued to honor it even after Mara's disappearance and presumed disappearance at the Battle of Saturn. At one point, Cayde misses the Tower and ventures out chasing enemies from the Vanguard. This campaign has turned into a hunt against the Misunderstood, a faction of fallen outlaws terrorizing the Shore. Cayde with his team entered the Spider's Palace in search of Arakes, the Trickster, however blown blown Cover after starting a fight with the Trickster on the game. Cayde later meets the Spider to explain himself since fighting in the Palace is strictly forbidden. The Spider, not happy, enlists Cayde and his team to capture the despised barons and put them in the prison of the elders. War for the Shore [edit] I would never ask you to do something that wasn't in your own interest, too. Remember that. So. business. I'll provide you with the location of the Barons - with which I'm quite familiar, as it was, until recently... Mine. — The spider The emergence of contempt has seen the Spider Union become entangled in conflict with them and driven out of their home territory. [7] In search of the Spider, Petra and the Guardian eliminated the forces of the Evil Near his hiding place and later met him to negotiate a deal. At first, the spider was not very interested in getting involved in a manhunt for Uldren, but he very much wanted Uldren's head to drive him out of his former territory. Thus, the spider offers the Guardian and Petra an agreement: the spider would give the Guardian all the information they need to hunt the barons and in return, the Guardians would hunt them down and accept any favor the spider asks for in the future. Despite the terms, the Guardian agrees. [10] With intel spiders, the Guardians accept the bounty from him and begin to dismantle the operations of the Misunderstood. The Guardians manage to kill Arasaks, the Trickster, Yaviks, the Rider and kaniks, the Mad Bomber. [11] With the nobility of contempt collapsing, the spider provides information about the comings and goings of Pirrha, the Rifleman, allowing the Guardian to fight pass his forces and decoys and eventually kill Pirrha; avenging the Phantom of Cayde. Later, the Guardian discovers that the remains of Servitors belong to the Spider completely emptied of their ether. The Spider takes this as proof that Reksis Vahn, the Burreau, who has a hatred for Servitors, is nearby. Despite his great strength and his flame cauldron weapon, the Guardian kills the sadistic baron. The Spider gave another piece of advice to the Guardian for Hiraks, the Mindbender, which resided near a downed hive warship, and where their second-in-command, Elykris, the machinist near salvage zone QX, was located. [14] Spider's forces fighting contempt The Guardians get rid of Hiraks and Elykris reducing the Mischiak's leadership to Fikrul, the Fanatic, the Archon of The Misunderstood, and Uldren himself. The spider shares new information that confirms that Uldren and Fikrul were spotted at the Awakened Watchtower, a place that would harbor the deepest secrets of the Awoken. In the structure, Uldren ordered Fikrul to the enemy as he finishes his work. The Spider helps the Guardians with its main forces and engage with the defenses of the Misunderstood as the guard violation passed in front of them and enters the Watchtower. At the entrance, they clash Fikrul who wants revenge on his fellow barons. Despite his dark ether powers, the Guardian manages to kill Fikrul and later dispose Uldren. [16] At a later date, the Guardians maintained vigilance over the tangled shore to track down any prison of escaped elders and provide favors for the spider to repay their debt to the fallen mob. This includes tracking down the Silent Croc, those affiliated with Irixs, Wolf Baroness and Beltrik, the Veils, Fortifier Yann and Calzar, Scarred Captain, the latter of the three the spider has personal beef with. [17] The Spider also has the Guardians face the remains of the Hiraks hive brood after agreeing to take it as a favor. They discover the Knights of the Hive, Hiraks's Familiar is poisoned with Ether as a result of Hiraks' experiments and later meet the ancestor of the Hive in the tangled coast was the former wife of the Hiraks, In Anáñh, Brood Queen. They manage to corner and kill the brooding queen, bringing more stability to Tangled Shore than for Spider to complain about the ease of their favor. [19] At the Spider's request, The Drifter, a close ally, assembled a team to reclaim the Prison of the Elders from the Barons. A team of firefighters infiltrates the prison and releases waves of rogue inmates. Pushing forward, they hear Variks' voice, which the Drifter notes as Varik's servitor malfunction. The finale culminates in the largest gun fight ever in prison history with the Guardians fighting the warden and his reinforcements. They beat the Mad Director and the Driftr later notes that he will clean up the prison to let the Spider sell it to the Awakened. [21] The Starry Night[edit] Beautiful. Really beautiful. And realized without a traveler or any of his nonsense. - The spider, admiring the starry night after Uldren's death and the defeat of most of the leaders of the Mischither, the spider returned to the expansion of its criminal operations and the management of the tangled coast. Arrha told him that he had learned from Mithrax that shipments of Titan's human supplies and artifacts were being shipped to The Last City by Sub-Commander Sloane using unarmed boats hidden with camouflage technology that they could catch with canvases. Intrigued, the spider ordered Arrha to go fishing for these boats, but soon became exasperated when his subordinate was confused by human terminology. Sighing, he told her to go and take a boat, and after Arrha's departure, he growled about having to explain himself to his undergrowth. [22] When Arrha brought him the first of the captured expeditions, the spider was disappointed by the contents, which, while priceless, was mostly technology and data he had little personal interest in. After expressing his displeasure to Arrha, he asked for the ship's diary, in which he discovered something interesting: that Sloane believed that an unknown part was stealing objects from the Green Green Arcology. Interested in who else stole Titan's cargoes, he ordered Brivi to take over the capture network while Arrha hunted the identity of the thief. [23] Arrha, the close associate of The Spider, was soon informed that the thief was Ghislaine, a Dead Orbit agent who was taking Titan's technology for the organization's own benefit. He ordered Arrha to intercept the thief and his ship and pass him in front of him. In the logs of the Dead Orbit spacecraft, the spider discovered that an ancient painting, The Starry Night, was one of the objects stolen by Dead Orbit from the Green Dove Arcology. While Ghislaine was protesting his capture, the spider tried to tone down and offered his friendship to the human, offering not only to accelerate him on titan's path, but also offered the previously captured shipment as a reward. Feigning disinterest, the whole spider requested in return was a symbolic gift in return and claimed to randomly choose the object number corresponding to the painting. However, Ghislaine revealed that the article was not part of its shipment and that the spider's men had to hack another dead orbit manifest out of their network. Hiding his disappointment, the spider asked if the painting was already on Earth and upon learning that it was, he ordered his men to let Ghislaine go unscathed. [24] In hopes of acquiring The Starry Night for its collection, the spider contacted his spy in Dead Orbit, Howe, and sent him a long list of weapons, ammunition and a few other items to acquire, including painting in an attempt to hide her desire for her. When Howe contacted him, the spider noticed his nervousness, and was annoyed that the agent had picked up on the inclusion of the board. Howe wondered why the spider would want a painting before the golden age, the spider decided to be killed for his curiosity and informed him that all he needed to know was that he was paid to bring it and gave him forty hours to provide the expedition. Howe brought the shipment and was quickly assassinated by the spider, who admired the painting in front of his subordinates and opined that it had been made without the absurdity of the Voyageur. He ordered Arrha to clear the body and leave, and once alone he hummed Mo Li Hua to open his secret treasure room under his throne. Descending into the room, the spider placed its last acquisition on its wall of paintings before the golden age. The Black Army[edit] Siviks, the brother of the spider Siviks - lost to none. My... impudent brother. And the aggressor of the Black Army. It even seems that a stint at the Seniors' Prison did little to help my brother understand the concept of consequences. A harder lesson be in order. — The spider with the Guardian now because of favors for him, the spider enlists them in the help of one of his precious business associates: Ada-1 and and secret black army; to which he offers them a badge to allow entry into the private store of the Army at the Tower. The Guardian will provide Ada-1 with the help it needs by recovering the Lost Volundr Forge from the Red Legion and forging their first weapon frame. However, their efforts with the Black Army would only become more complicated from there. After the rampage of the Misunderstood, Siviks, who had previously fallen with his brother about his relationship with humanity, was able to escape the Prison of the Elders and gather enough followers to form his own rival union, the Scourge of Kell. [4] Seeking revenge, he began attacking the territory of The Spider and distributing weapons belonging to the Black Army to fall through the solar system. When Fallen manufactured black army equipment to surrender to the Guardians, Ada-1 immediately urged the Guardians to retrieve equipment as evidence to be presented to the Spider. [31] Noting its increasing competition and smuggling near its shore, the spider enlisted the Guardians to retrieve the local fallen to obtain information about Siviks' newly discovered union and bring it to the ground. In a last attempt to gain an advantage over the Guardians and its competition, Siviks sought the secrets of the Niobe project, an initiative to develop and produce improved prototypes of black army for the Fallen. [33] Following clues about his whereabouts in the stolen pages of Meyrin's diary, Siviks led his syndicate to take over Niobe's restricted laboratories, reaching control of its security protocols and the Bergusia Forge hidden inside. Despite siviks using laboratory defense protocols to his advantage, the Guardians were able to better his tactics and fallen reinforcements. This forces the Siviks to retreat and lets the Guardians claim their prize. Siviks then released The Black Recluse to protect the final forge, named precisely to mock the Spider, but was thwarted by the Guardians. In a final stalemate Siviks, the mad brother of the spider, is ended against the Guardian who recover the last secrets and technology of the Black Army while leaving the Scourge of Kell without leader and totally paralyzed. [36] [37] Joker's Wild[edit] At about the same time that the Drifter introduced Gambit Prime, the Guardian visited the spider on issues related to the Drifter after completing a Reckoning race. Side the Drifter The Spider's Gjallarhorn If the player has chosen to side with the Drifter, the Guardian visits the Spider to buy an item known as The Jerky for the Drifter. Among the Jerky a caged ghost and a Gjallarhorn replica, although only The Jerky can be purchased. This exchange leads the Guardian to go to Titan to acquire supplies for the Drifter. [38] Agree with the Vanguard If the player has chosen to side with the vanguard, the Guardian confronts the spider the spider his relationship with the Drifter. The Spider responds by saying that he is a simple businessman and would be willing to sever relations with the Drifter for the right price. After paying a bribe of 50,000 Lueur, the spider informs the Guardian that the Drifter was planning something on Titan, prompting them to go there to investigate further. The spider later informed the Drifter of this investigation, prompting the Drifter to contact the Guardian directly while he was on Titan. [39] Dawn Season[edit] After the Guardian found the nucleus for the Bastion in the corridors of time, they collected data from fallen targets and brought them to the spider. He deciphered the intel's LightKiller name, telling the Guardian of his legacy. He decides to help the Guardian by first tipping them on one of his old acquaintances hiding in the empty tank, betting on fights with Azilis. After killing the captain, they bring a note to the spider left by the original owner, Reysk, who was killed by a guardian fireteam and buried somewhere in the tangled coast. The Spider then ordered the Guardian to patrol the tangled Shore to force its inhabitants to obtain answers on the location of the tomb. Finally, one of Spider's associates was word of the location of the tomb in the Trappers' Cave. However, the Guardian will discover that Reysk has been distorted into contempt chief. After the revelation, the Spider gave the Guardian the location of Reysk, the only place where the influence of contempt was strongest, the Hollow Den. Arrivals Season[edit] During the Festival of The Lost, The Spider enlisted the help of the Guardian to investigate the operations of the House of Kings who ventured into the ruins of the Dreadnaught to learn the magic of the Hive. He notes that the Vex had taken an interest in the activities of the Kings and had stolen their rescue and simulated it in the haunted forest. [46] [47] [47] Wrathorn Hunt[edit] After the dark returns to the ground system, the tangled Shore is attacked by the forces of Xivu Arath, the God of the War Hive, forcing the Spider and his union to be on the defensive again. Worse still, Xivu Arath's forces use artifacts called Cryptoliths that drive Hive into a state of mad fury and corrupt other species in his service, called the Wrathborn, some of which include members of the Spider's organization. The Spider soon meets the Guardian once again after their mission to Luna has ended with gentleness; they managed to save the Warlock Osiris, but his Ghost Sagira sacrificed himself to save his Guardian. To avenge Sagira and fight Xivu Arath, the Spider proposes a partnership with the Guardian to restore his and reopen the Glimmer stream, they would hunt the Wrathborn and their leader, the Great Celebrant of Xivu Arath, and the Spider would provide the necessary resources for a hunt. During their exchange, the Guardian learned, to their great shock, that Uldren Sov was resurrected as the Guardian and that he was in the service of the Spider, known as The Crow. The spider states that he found Uldren wandering aimlessly in the reef and while he could have captured him and sent him to the Tower, he knew very well what was waiting for them there. Instead, the spider brought the Raven into its services as a personal agent and hunter. Despite the way Crow works for him, however, Spider planted a failsafe in the chassis of Crow's Ghost, Clint, if Crow moves away from his nest, then his Ghost will explode, killing them both. Regardless of the Guardian's personal bad feelings towards the Raven, the Spider then worked with him to fight the Wrathborn and xivu Arath, but made them never mention the name Uldren Sov. Personality and traits [edit] Remember, my friend, even when you do your duty, there are always opportunities to do what is profitable. - The Spider The Spider is a bit like a stereotypical criminal kingpin, he will make great efforts to maintain his influence and has no qualms about fighting his own genre to do so. He is even willing to ally himself with Petra Venj, an old knowledge of his own, and the Guardian, to restore his territory and deal with the Misunderstood and Uldren. This is also supported by the description of one of his daily bonuses where he claims that he would have even considered reaching an agreement with the Red Legion if they had not disrespected him. However, although he maintains that their alliance is simply for business, the spider shows a level of honor and respect for the Guardian, keeping his word in their affairs and continuing their friendship. Despite this, the spider is willing to change an agreement to ensure that those who owe it a debt do not repay itself too quickly and too easily, because it does not want to get the short end of the stick. This was evident when the Guardians authorized the Hive infestation on the tangled coast. After killing the brood queen, The Spider found that the threat was too easy for her to satisfy their debt to him. Despite Ghost's objections, the Spider points out that the mission was not an agreement, only considerations. He probably finds the Guardians too useful and qualified to simply say that all debts are paid. Although the spider can be very ruthless about how he runs his criminal enterprise, the mafia boss has shown a capacity for generosity and a reasonable nature. Instead of simply accumulating all the profits and leaving nothing to his employees, he makes sure that his is paid what they have earned, much more generous than a contemporary Fallen Kell. Archon or Baron. [2] The spider exhibits a fascination with various aspects of humanity and its culture. He has no interest in what Fallen would normally consider priceless.[50] and eagerly collects ancient man as well as dead ghosts. [51] On top of that, the spider likes to collect trophies, for interest or for monetary purposes, from its dead enemies, to the point where it offers them bonuses. The Spider is very fluent in English. His voice lacks a lot of grunts and clicks associated with Elikśni's speech; this may be due to either practice or some form of translation device (although he claims that Variks speaks perfect English as well, deliberately using poor grammar to appear more harmless to the Awakened). Reflecting his fascination with humanity, he frequently uses human figures of speech and body language, even when talking to other Elikśni (to whom such gestures make no sense). [53] Gameplay[54] Gameplay[edit] The Spider provides bonuses targeting prison former escapees throughout the solar system. It also sells brewing materials, with four planetary materials and the required currency turning by daily reset. Purchasing Spider's upgrade cores will double their cost during that day until they are reset. Enemies sought in lost areas can also drop spider-specific weapons and armor. Faction Weapons[edit] Infusion Materials[edit] Quotes[edit] Idle Quotes That's right, my friend. Good choice, my friend. What is your phrase of the Earth... If we meet again? What do you say friend? What about pro quo before you leave? I agree. You taste good! Bring me Arrha. I have a task for him. Don't be shy... It annoys me! The Drifter? Here? And he didn't stop to say hello? I am... Disappointed. So many questions! I'm starting to get offended You don't want to see me offended. I think you'll find our friendship... Nice. No one has called me Wolf in a very long time. I was born in this house, yes. But even then, I had a bad investment when I saw one. Bounty Quotes House of Dusk, fah! House of despair! House of differences erased! Differences define us. The House of Twilight, as it is, hangs by a thread. I see no material harm to my people if you go ahead and cut them loose, my friend. Oh, of course, the Prison of the Ancients was a collaboration between the Awakened and the Elikśni. Don't look so surprised. Maybe if the Red Legion had spoken to me, we could have reached an agreement, but they disrespected me. I want them out. [49] Trivia[edit] The Spider was once a born wolf, traces of his past can also be seen on his blue helmet. Alongside Variks, The Loyal and Mithrax, the Abandoned, The Spider is the third Fallen to be an ally of the Guardian. It is the second fallen observed speaking English behind Variks, The Loyal. However, he speaks it much more fluently than Variks. The spider was rather agitated with his hands, often moving his hands a lot. He uses a ghost shell to deal with this. He has a fascination with the culture of the Earth before the golden age, because he collects the most works of art throughout human history. His collection includes several examples of ancient Greek pottery, Vincent van Gogh's Starry Night and two paintings implicit as Leonardo da Vinci's Mona Lisa and Georgia O'Keeffe's Cow Skull: red, white and blue. The spider's obsession with pre-golden human culture extends beyond art, as the story of the Cryptolith Decore reveals, which it has a pre-collapse data block, named after a fruit. The Spider is performed and voiced by Robin Atkin Downes. The spider may have its own ketch, as such a ship can be found by turning around in the safe zone at Thieves' Landing. The ketch is decorated in orange stripes, reflecting the spider's badges and bonuses. The Spider and the Drifter have a strong business relationship. So much so that Spider would send his failed associates to survive the Drifter's Gambit and Gambit Prime or die. The spider shows enmity towards multiple prison escapees, such as Calzar, Scarred Captain, Fortifier Yann, and Student of Beltrik, personally issuing bounties on them. [57] In the wailer's traditional tab of the exotic sparrow keeper, the spider is wrongly described as having 20 fingers, which is impossible because fallen have always been depicted with three fingers on each of their four hands (a total of 12). This is probably a monitoring of developers. Gallery[edit] The Spider converses with the Guardian in the Tangled Shore. The spider making a deal. The spider does business with its associates.
