However, it is also a great financial investment that you want to protect. A broken screen can ruin your aesthetics pretty quickly. Finding a case or cover that matches the duration with a healthy dose of style can be tough. Fortunately, we've compiled a list of some of our favorite options to protect your iPhone XS and keep it looking good. UAG Plasma Case If you want maximum protection without really having to dent your wallet, this UAG plasma series case for the iPhone XS Max is one of the best ways to go. It is a very light case that combines a soft, impact-resistant core with a hard outer shell, allowing it to offer military shock protection [MIL STD 810G 516.6]. It also features an elevated elastic lip on the phone's touchscreen, so as to reduce the chances that something will signal or damage the screen. You may be forgiven for assuming that such a rough case can affect how the iPhone XS Max works, but the case is fully compatible with Apple Pay and wireless charging, while its buttons are extremely tying and working very well. Ted Baker Fashion HD Glass Case One of the most elegant choices on this list comes from the famed British luxury clothing store Ted Baker. It is a beautiful luxury case made of black electrolysed glass, which also features a bulletproof glass insert in case you want the maximum possible levels of protection. It is particularly protective, yet its floral design on the back gives it a very decorative appearance, and the glass has a smooth touch feel. It is also very well cut and configured, featuring precise ports and button holes, so everything works as smoothly as it would be without a case. Vaja Grip GT Leather Case The iPhone XS Max has no lack of style, but if you're an adventurous genre that loves speed and style in the same measure, you may want something a little more dynamic. Vaja's Grip GT is the case of sports car enthusiasts, with an unmistakable style and presence. It is made of high quality Argentine leather that is soft to the touch, while it is also durable and protective. While it will not overcome a larger (and more rough case in protection, is still equal to most tasks, and will be protected from scratches and minor bumps. It's absolutely, utterly gorgeous, and while it's certainly not cheap, it's a great choice if you won't come to terms with the style. Mophie Juice Pack Air Battery Case There is a heavy battery stuffed into the iPhone XS Max, but there could always be more. Mophie's Juice Pack Air is one of the best battery battery out there, so whether it's a long trip, or often find yourself away from chargers, this is a great choice. It adds another 1,720mAh of battery to your phone, which Mophie claims is enough to extend the value of another day of use. While it adds extra volume to your phone, it's relatively thin compared to other battery cases. The hard outer shell provides decent protection, with raised corners that protect the screen from scratches and dirt. It also works with wireless charging, so you can charge your phone and battery at the same time. While it's expensive, it's worth it if you need the extra battery life. Ringke Wave Case There are only so many ways to make cases look unique, but Ringke always seems to hit on a new one. The wave case is defined as a one-looker, with a three-dimensional texture that raises up waves - hence the name. This elevated texture means it's easier to hold a hold of your phone, and the dual-layer construction uses TPU and hard polycarbonate together to ensure stable protection from drops, bumps, and scratches. There's an elevated bezel to keep your phone from resting on surfaces, and there's even a cord connection point. The unique look can be a disadvantage of course, and it's not going to be for everyone - but if two-tone waves call on you, this is a great choice. Otterbox Otter + Pop Symmetry Case Series The Otterbox symmetry case is made from TPU and polycarbonate, so it was already quite protective. However, there is an easy way to greatly improve - chuck a Popsocket there. The Otter + Pop Symmetry case is the tough case you need if you love the hard protection and extra grip provided by popsockets. The PopTop Popsocket can be swapped out for other designs and stays flush with the case when you don't need to – so you don't have to have the PopTop protruding all the time. You can do what you would normally do with your Popsocket, except now you have amazing Otterbox protection thrown into the mix. You'll pay a pretty penny for this case though, which is definitely a drawback. Skech Stark Minimum Protective Case Do you know why so many cases have reinforced corners and airbags? It's because corners are the part of a phone that will hit the ground first in a fall, and strengthening these areas from impact damage is the best route to take when protecting against falls. This case from Skech maximizes drop protection, but does so in a way that does not prevent the of your phone. The top, back and corners of the device are covered with transparent and absorbent TPU crusts, while the sides remain exposed, so you can still feel the cool metal of your iPhone. These exposed sides are nice if you want to pretend you're not using a case, but it's important to note that they are less than full protection and leave the sides open to scratches and other damage. If this is it bothers you, then this is an excellent case. Snakehive Vintage Plum Wallet Case Cases are the best choice if you want to add an element of chic, executive style to your phone. Each Snakehive case is handmade from quality European nubuck leather that will age over time and develop a unique patina. A front cover offers protection throughout the screen that is located throughout the screen when not in use, but can also fold on a horizontal base if required. A plastic holder inside keeps your phone comfortably in place, while a layer of soft skin inside protects it from scratches. The front cover also contains three card slots to keep spare cash or cards, so you can quickly hide travel cards or spare cash. Comfortable and elegant, this is an excellent choice. Mujo Full Leather Wallet Case This case from Mujo is an excellent example of a luxurious, luxurious leather case. It is made of a soft and beautiful skin that will develop a unique patina as it ages, and also uses an inner layer of microfibre that pads your phone and protects it from scratches. It doesn't have a fold-out folio-style cover, but it's still a wallet case, thanks to the leather card pocket on the back that will comfortably accommodate up to three cards or some spare cash. It's extremely thin, comes with an elevated bezel that protects your screen, and has leather button covers for full protection. It's definitely expensive, but if you want some great protection with a beautiful style, it's right here. Incipio Carnaby Esquire Series The Incipio Carnaby Esquire is definitely an eye-catcher, with a distinctive layer of fabric set over a hard core TPU. The fabric gives a more casual feel then you get with most cases, and its tight material provides good grip for your fingers. The TPU core underneath is no less important though, and adds shock-resistance, as well as adding more grip to the sides. It's drop-proofed up to 6 feet, which is no bad feat, and there are increased tips to protect your phone from being fixed on dirty surfaces. It's subtle and elegant, and while it won't be as protective as other, larger cases, it's still very protective, and there's no doubt in our minds the textile look is worth it. Peel Super Thin Case The new iPhone XS Max is a beautiful blend of glass and stainless steel, and we don't blame you if you're hesitant to cover it. But even a little bit of it can go a long way – and that's where super-thin peel cases come in. They are extremely thin at just 0.35mm, and come in a variety of branding-free, minimalist colors. The clear choice is completely transparent and thin enough to forget your phone is even wearing a case. Being so subtle, Peel's case isn't going to be as resistant to damage as larger cases, and you'll probably find it's only injury-proof against more minor bumps and scratches, rather rather significant drops. But whether it's between that or going naked, Peel is a great choice. The Spigen Ultra Hybrid Spigen is known for providing excellent smartphone protection and the Ultra Hybrid case is no different. It is a hybrid of materials - hence the name - combining an absorbent TPU bumper with a hard and clear polycarbonate rear panel to provide great protection against a variety of threats. The soft TPU provides an extra surface for your fingers, while the transparent rear panel gives a clear picture of your phone - allowing you to show it off while maintaining protection. Each corner is equipped with an air cushion for extra protection against falls, and has been treated to prevent yellowing over time. It's a simple but effective choice. Hitcase Splash The iPhone XS Max has a water resistance rating of IP68, which should mean it's able to sink into the water for up to an hour - but if you're heading into a aquatic environment and want to be sure your expensive phone will be fine, consider grabbing a waterproof case. Hitcase Splash is on the expensive side for a protective case, but this fully closed case comes with an IP68 rating to keep mud and water away from your device, while a combination of TPU and polycarbonate protects against drops and bumps. It's quite bulky, as this kind of protection is often – but there's a clear window on your iPhone, and it's not a bad looker for what it is. But, boy, it's expensive. On the plus side, it is also compatible with the hitcase range of camera lenses, giving you a number of options to capture your adventures, and creating a great utility case. Nomad Rugged Case Nothing screams style quite like leather, and if you want to wrap your iPhone XS Max in some serious style, then check out Nomad's rugged case. It's made of a variety of materials, but it starts with a hard polycarbonate shell that clips onto your iPhone and holds it tight. A TPU bumper is then attached onto the edges of the polycarbonate, adding extra impact resistance. Finally, the case is wrapped in high quality Horween leather that ages over time to create a truly unique case. It's not for everyone, but if you're looking to make a statement with your protection option, then Nomad's rugged case provides just that as well as good protection. Speck Candyshell Grip Speck cases are extremely typical — and Candyshell Grip is an example that more than any of its products. Candyshell's impressive look comes from the use of a double layer construction that combines TPU and polycarbonate to create a hypothesis that Speck claims diffuses the shock extremely well. The elegant, raised ridges at the back of the case also add traction, while an elevated façade means the phone screen remains elevated by surfaces. It has been tested to meet military standards for test, and you need to keep your iPhone XS Max well protected from drops, scratches and bumps. Catalyst Impact Protection Here is another tough case with a ton of added utility. Catalyst's impact protection case brings all the features you'd expect from a tough case, including a drop resistance of up to 3 meters, a flexible TPU bumper and a clear polycarbonate rear panel. It also has an elevated bezel to protect the screen, as well as a full seal on the rear camera that helps keep out dust and debris. There's an attachment for a cord so you can ensure you don't carelessly drop your case, and there's even a rotating switch for the iPhone's muted switch. It is also quite thin, with a subtle but rugged style. The drawbacks? It's expensive for what it is. Noreve Delivery D Wallet Case leather wallet cases can be beautiful things, and they don't get much more beautiful than Noreve's highly customizable collection of wallet cases. Regardless of where you choose, you will get the usual high quality materials and manufacture of Noreve. But it's the level of choice that's the really special element here. Noreve also recently added the option to choose from a selection of paintings to add to your case. If you want a very special style of case, then Noreve is perfect.
