She is currently signed to the WWE as a wrestler. [13] Her long-standing nickname, Rowdy, was inherited from the late professional wrestler Roddy Piper. Rousey won a gold medal in judo at the 2008 Summer Olympics in London. She won her MMA debut for King of the Cage before moving to Strikeforce, where she became the last Strikeforce Women's Bantamweight Champion before the Ultimate Fighting Championship (UFC) acquired Strikeforce in 2011. Rousey participated in the first women's fight in UFC history when she defended her title against Liz Carmouche at UFC 157. After setting the record for most UFC title defenses of a woman (6), Rousey had her first professional loss in MMA when she lost her title to Holly Holm. [15] [16] In 2018, she became the first female boxer to be inducted into the WWE. [20] She made her debut in WrestleMania 34, and later won Raw Women's her first WWE and professional wrestling title, at SummerSlam. She then led the first WWE all-women's pay-per-view event when she successfully defended her title in the first Women's WrestleMania main event to Becky Lynch in a triple threat fight at WrestleMania 35; This left her reign as Raw Women's Champion as the second longest in the title's history in 231 days. She has also had success as an actress and writer, starring in the films The Expendables 3 (2014),[21] Furious 7 (2015),[22] and Mile 22 (2018),[23] and releasing her autobiography My Fight / Your Fight in 2015.
Rousey is the only woman to have won a championship in both the UFC and WWE, as well as the only woman to have led a pay-per-view tournament in both companies. Rousey was named the best female athlete of all time in an ESPN fan poll in 2015, and Fox Sports described her as one of the defining athletes of the 21st century. [26] [27] [28] Ronda Jean Rousey was born in Riverside, California[30] on 1 January 1984. Rousey is of English, Polish, and, through her maternal grandfather was partly of Afro-Venezuelan descent, and her maternal-born-owned Trinidadian great-grandfather, Alfred E Waddell, was a doctor who emigrated to Canada and became one of the first black doctors in North America. [34] [35] Her stepfather is an aerospace engineer. [37] Her biological father, having broken his back with his daughters and learning that he would be paraplegic, committed suicide in 1995 when Rousey was eight. [32] AnnMaria earned a doctorate in educational psychology from the University of California, Riverside when her daughters were growing up. [32] In the first six years of her life, Rousey struggled with speech and could not form an understandable sentence due to apraxia, a neurological childhood speech disorder. [40] This speech disorder was attributed to being born with her umbilical cord wrapped around her neck. When Rousey was three years old, her mother and father moved from Riverside, California, to Jamestown, North Dakota, to get intensive speech therapy with specialists at Minot State University. Rousey dropped out of high school and later received her GED. She grew up between Jamestown and Southern California, retired from her judo career as 21-21-20 and started her MMA career at age 22-22 when she realized she didn't want to spend her life on a conventional field of work. [44] Rousey began judo judo with her mother at the age of 11. Rousey trained with her until she was 13, when she accidentally broke her mother's wrist. Rousey was the youngest judoka to qualify for the Athens Olympics in 2004, Rousey won gold at the Junior Judo Junior Judo Championships in Budapest, Hungary. In April 2006, she became the first female American judoka in nearly 10 years to win an A-Level tournament when she went 5-0 to claim gold at the Birmingham World Cup in Britain. Later that year, the 19-year-old won a bronze medal at the World Junior Championships, becoming the first American athlete to win two junior world championship medals. In February 2007, Rousey moved up to 70 kg, where she was ranked as one of the top three women in the world. She competed in the women's team event at the 2008 Summer Olympics in Beijing, China. She lost her quarter-final to Dutch ex-world champion Edith Bosch, but qualified for a bronze medal match through the repechage bracket. Rousey defeated Annett Boehm of Yuko to win a bronze medal (Judo offers two bronze medal in women's judo since starting as an Olympic sport in 1992. After winning an Olympic medal, Rousey shared a studio apartment with a roommate in Venice Beach, California, and worked three jobs as a bartender and cocktail waitress to help herself and her to judo clubs run by her old teammates. Rousey attended the Hayastan MMA Academy, run by Gokor Chivichyan, where she trained with fellow future MMA fighters Manny Gamburyan and Karo Parisyan. According to Rousey, Hayastan practiced a more quarrelsome style of judo versus the more technical Japanese style. Rousey mostly trained with men larger than she was, often getting frustrated and crying when she was thrown and couldn't throw anyone.
Probably from 2002 to 2005 I cried every night of training, Rousey said. Rousey trained closely with Gamburyan volunteered to open the gym every afternoon and work with her personally. Back in 2004, her teammates thought Rousey would kill these girls in MMA, but also thought she was too pretty to be hit in the face and should continue to do judo. While Gamburyan and Parisyan entered MMA, Rousey stated in watching was Manny Gamburyan against Nate Diaz in The Ultimate Fighter final. Rousey stated that she was never so excited judo or other sport. After the 2008 Olympics the following year, she decided to start MMA through Team Hayastan. Rousey also trained at glendale fighting club, to which she was introduced by Gamburyan and other Hayastan teammates. She began training under her long-term MMA coach Edmond Tarverdyan in the GFC. [50] She trained in Jiu Jitsu at Dynamix MMA with Henry Akins from 2011 to 2014[52] and continued to train with Ryron Gracie academy, [53] as well as BJ Penn of Art of Jiu Jitsu. [54] In wrestling, Rousey trained under Romanian American Leo Frîncu. Rousey made her amateur debut on June 6, 2011. She beat Hayden Munoz with submission because of an armfield of 23 seconds. Rousey faced Taylor Stratford in the semifinals of the Tuff-N-Uff tournament. Rousey has a 3-0 record in amateur MMA competition, and the combined duration of all her amateur fights is under 2 minutes. Rousey made her professional mixed martial arts debut on May 27, 2014. She sent Ediane Gomes with an armfield of 25 seconds. Rousey met kickboxing champion Charmaine Tweet in an MMA fight at the Hard Knocks Fighting Championship: School of Hard Knocks on 12 September 2014. [60] Strikeforce (2011–2012) Early success Rousey was due to make her Strikeforce debut against Sarah D'Alelio on August 30, 2011, in Las Vegas, Nevada. Rousey beat D'Alelio shouted pressure more than once, and that D'Alelio denied this and claimed to have shouted Aaaahhh. According to the uniform rules of mixed martial arts, one of these utterances would still be a verbal submission. Rousey met Julia Budd in strikeforce challengers 20 on 18. [65] Rousey won via submission due to an armbar in the first round, dislocating Budd's elbow in the process. After the fight, she announced plans to move down to 135 pounds to challenge Miesha Tate, the Strikeforce Women's Bantamweight Champion at the time, with whom she had developed a much-publicized rivalry. trainer Edmond Tarverdyan said rousey started her MMA career in the 145lbs division because she had to be able to make weight at short notice, due to the difficulty of finding willing opponents. [66] Bantamweight Champion Rousey challenged Tate to the strikeforce title on May 3, 2014. She defeated Tate by submission due to an armbar in the first round, again dislocating her opponent's elbow, to become the new Strikeforce Women's Bantamweight Champion. Rousey appeared in All Access: Ronda Rousey on Showtime. The half-hour special debuted on August 8, 2012. [71] UFC President Dana White revealed during the program that Over the next 10 years, if there's a woman in the octagon, it's likely to be Ronda Rousey. [72] The second edition of the special was broadcast on 15 September 1945. Rousey also appeared on Conan. Rousey defended her Strikeforce title against Sarah Kaufman in Strikeforce: Rousey v Kaufman on April 18. Rousey said she would throw Kaufman's arm on the corner after ripping it off with a rebar, and threatened to strangle or pound Kaufman's face to death. During the fight, Rousey quickly took Kaufman down and sent her with an armbar in 54 seconds to retain the Strikeforce Women's Featherweight Champion Cristiane Cyborg Santos wanted to fight her, it would have to happen at bantamweight. [77] [78] [79] Ultimate Fighting Championship (2012–2016) First female UFC Champion Rousey in 2012 In November 2012, the Ultimate Fighting Championship announced that Rousey had become the first female boxer to sign with the UFC. [14] [80] UFC President Dana White officially announced at the UFC on Fox: Henderson vs. Diaz before the fight press conference that Rousey was the first UFC Women's Bantamweight Champion. Rousey initially opposed using the nickname her friends gave her, Rowdy, and felt it would be disrespectful to professional wrestler Rowdy Roddy Piper. After meeting Piper (circa 2012 or 2013) through Gene LeBell, who helped train them both, Piper personally gave his approval. Rousey defended her title against Liz Carmouche, Rousey continued to defend her Bantamweight Championship title, winning the fight at 4:49 into the first round by submission due to an armbar. [81] Carmouche dislocated Ronda Rousey's jaw during the fight. [82] After Cat Zingano defeated Miesha Tate in The Ultimate Fighter: Team Jones vs. Team Sonnen Finale, Dana White announced that Zingano would be the trainer of The Ultimate Fighter 18 against Rousey. May 28, Zingano after sustaining a knee injury, it was announced that Miesha Tate would train The Ultimate 18 against Rousey. Rousey met Miesha Tate in a rematch of Strikeforce at UFC 168 on April 28. After going past the first two rounds, where Tate survived an armbar attempt and a three-set attempt, Rousey eventually sent Tate through the armbar in the third round to retain the Bantamweight Championship. In an interview with the Los Angeles Daily News, Rousey said she had lost muscle during her film commitments and had not been able to regain her full strength for the Tate fight. [86] Record-setting championship regime It was announced at the UFC 168 press conference after the fight that Rousey would defend the UFC Women's Bantamweight Championship against Olympic medalist and undefeated boxer Sara McMann in the main event at UFC 170 on April 22. Rousey won the fight by TKO after knocking down McMann with a knee to the body just over a minute into the first round. This marked Rousey's first career victory via a method other than armbar. The shutdown caused controversy, with some sports writers and companions finding it premature. Rousey would defend the UFC Women's Bantamweight Championship against Alexis Davis in the main event at UFC 175 on April 5, 2014. She won the fight by knockout 16 seconds into the first round. Rousey broke her thumb during the fight. [100] The emphatic victory also earned Rousey and Cat Zingano was scheduled to take place at UFC 182 for the women's bantamweight title. [93] However, the match was moved to 28. Rousey beat Zingano with an armbar in 14 seconds, the shortest fight in UFC championship history before Conor McGregor beat José Aldo in 13 seconds and 11 months later. Rousey fought Bethe Correia in Brazil at UFC 190, winning the fight by knockout 34 seconds into the first round. Rousey dedicated the fight to Rowdy Roddy Piper, who died the day before, commenting that Piper was one of her inspirations and had supported her use of her nickname. [98] The fight was Rousey's sixth with the UFC, all of which had been victories. She spent 1,077 seconds in the octagon to achieve all six and accumulated $1,080,000 in prize money; this equates to almost $1002.79 for every second spent fight in each UFC weight class, the fastest of which was the Heavyweight Division with a time of 7 minutes and 59 seconds. [101] Title loss and subsequent retirement In her seventh title defense, Rousey faced Holly Holm in the main event at UFC 193 15. Early in the second Holm knocked Rousey and Holm were awarded a $50,000 Fight of the Night bonus. In December 2015, she was medically cleared. Rousey returned to face current champion Amanda Nunes on 30 June after losing the fight via TKO due to a stroke just 48 seconds into the first round. Although she did not formally announce her departure, when asked if she would fight MMA again by Ellen DeGeneres in 2018, Rousey replied. I think it's just as likely that I'll go back to another Olympics for judo. She was inducted into the UFC 170 375,000 on February 23, 2013 Ronda Rousey vs. Liz Carmouche UFC 157 450,000 on February 28, 2013, 2014 Ronda Rousey vs. Sara McMann UFC 170 375,000

Fighters Strike a Passive Pose... Rousey is nothing if not expressive. She often smiles, squins so tightly that her eyes disappear. She cries easily, a girl's habit she never grew from. And before every match she glares at her opponent as if she were ready to put a permanent end to a lifelong feud. After the game, she smiles again, and usually immaculately. - The New Yorker, 2014[43] In an interview in 2012[109] before her first fight with Miesha Tate, Rousey said: When I did judo my greatest advantage was my conditioning and my pace; I used to wear people out. She had taken to heart a quote from Ryoko Tani to fight every five seconds as if it were the last five seconds of the fight. A decorated judoka, Rousey usually grounds an opponent with hip throws and sweeps, then seeks to finish with strikes or submissions. [110] From top position, she usually attacks with head attacks with blows from side control; In the rear position, she often secures a back attachment and attacks with head attacks. Rousey is right-handed, but is a left-handed judoka who fights in an orthodox stance as a striker. Rousey's favorite MMA boxer is Fedor Emelianenko, whose fighting style she works to emulate. Rousey is known for her prowess in grappling and is especially known for her string of victories with an armbar. Against talented strikers such as Julia Budd and Sarah Kaufman, Rousey has usually brought the fight down and sought a quick submission. [111] Only mighty grapplers, such as Miesha Tate and Liz Carmouche, have been competitive with on the ground. [110] In the early fights of her MMA career, Rousey used mainly strikingly to set up judo. She became a more proficient striker after her UFC debut, which led to her first victory by stopping. While standing, Rousey usually uses jabs, knees and upper hand rights. [118] She rarely stood side on with a set of boxing attitude, but would square up to her opponent, while still generating strong striking power, especially when near the fence, or clinching opponents with her left hand to close the distance. While discussing her signature armbar in an interview, Rousey noted that her judoka mother jumped on her every morning to wake her up with arm bars. Rousey has used harsh language and openly downplayed the abilities of her opponents, which she explains as a way to generate more publicity for the sport. [122] [123] Professional wrestling career Background Rousey is a professional wrestling fan. She, Shayna Baszler, Jessamyn Duke and Marina Shafir have called themselves The Four Horsewomen, a play on The Four Horsemen professional wrestling stable, with the blessing of members Ric Flair and Arn Anderson. [124] WWE Sporadic performances (2014–2017) Rousey with The Rock at WrestleMania 31 The Four Horsewomen were recognized on camera and comments as such, in the front row of the WWE's SummerSlam event in August 2014. The group also went backstage during the event, meeting Paul Heyman, among others. Rousey was interviewed by WWE.com that night. When asked if, like Brock Lesnar, she would cross over to wrestling, she replied You never know. [126] At WrestleMania 31 in March 2015, the four horse women sat in the front row. During an in-ring altercation between The Rock and The Authority (Stephanie McMahon and Triple H), McMahon punched the rock and ordered him to leave his ring. She taunted him and said he wouldn't hit a woman. He left, stopped and walked up to Rousey for a loud listen. He then helped her into the ring and said she would like to beat McMahon for him. After a stare, The Rock attacked Triple H. When he stumbled toward Rousey, she took him out of the ring. McMahon tried to punch her, was blocked and Rousey and Rock celebrated in the ring, while the esa retreated with the implication of revenge. [127] The segment was made her WWE debut in the tournament. In addition, The event, all four Horsewomen had a face-off with Charlotte Flair, Becky Lynch, and Bayley, who, in the WWE alongside Sasha Banks, is also known as the Four Horse Women, hinting at a possible future feud between the two groups. [129] [130] [131] It was reported in 2017 that Rousey had signed with the WWE full-time and had trained at the WWE Performance Center in Orlando. Raw Women's Champion (2018-2019) Rousey at WrestleMania 34 with Kurt Angle (Also her WWE debut fight) Rousey made a surprise appearance at Royal Rumble on April 28. ESPN immediately revealed during the segment that she had signed a full-time contract with the WWE. [20] [133] The jacket that Rousey wore during this performance belonged to Rowdy Roddy Piper, given to her by her son. On February 12, Rousey was involved in an in-ring altercation with Triple H and Stephanie McMahon, after which she signed her contract (in history), thus making her part of the Raw brand, [135] In March, it was announced that Rousey will make her debut at WrestleMania 34, the WWE flagship event, in a mixed tag team fight pitting Rousey and Kurt Angle as her partner against Stephanie McMahon and Triple H.[137][138] At the event, Rousey sent McMahon with her trademark armbar submission hold to secure victory for her team. [139] Her debut performance was widely praised by both fans and wrestling critics, with Dave Meltzer of the Wrestling her performance one of the better pro wrestling debuts I've ever seen. [140] [140] [142] The Washington Post noted the positive fan reaction, saying that The fight exceeded expectations, with fans firmly behind Rousey and [fans] surprised [at her] high-level coordination and the quality of wrestling. Even those who didn't agree that the fight was entertaining. In May, after she was challenged by then-champion Nia Jax, it was announced that Rousey would get her first opportunity in the Raw Women's Championship at the next pay-per-view, Money in the Bank. [144] At the event, Rousey won the fight by disqualification after an intervention by Alexa Bliss, who attacked both Rousey and Jax and cashed in the money in the bank contract (which she won earlier that night) to win the title instead. For her first singles match and title opportunity, she was again praised by fans and critics for her performance, with CNET saying For the first time, [WWE's] biggest mainstream star is a woman. [147] They believed that despite concern that the battle would Rousey's own inexperience, which would greatly damage her aura and star power, came across as a formidable, believable star wrestler. The fight was good, but she was amazing, Over the next two months, Rousey started her first feud as part of the WWE with Alexa Bliss over the title, which included a suspension (again in kayfabe) after Rousey attacked Bliss, Kurt Angle and several officials. [149] After honoring her suspension from the in-ring competition, Rousey was given a Raw Women's Championship bout by Raw general manager Kurt Angle against Bliss at SummerSlam. Rousey crushed Bliss on August 19 to win the title, her first wwe championship victory. [152] In a rematch between the two that took place a month later on 16 September 1945, the two of them were in the middle of the night. During her championship regime, Rousey continued to fend off title contenders such as Nikki Bella (in the main event of the first all women's salary-per-view Evolution),[154][155][156] Mickie James,[157] Nia Jax, [158][158] Natalya[160][161] and Sasha Banks. Rousey was scheduled to face Becky Lynch in survivor series pay-per-view in an interbranding champion against champion against champion against champion combat, but Lynch was legitimately injured during an invasion angle just minutes after she attacked Rousey backstage. Rousey met Charlotte Flair at the event instead, winning by disgualification after Flair attacked her with a kendo stick and steel chairs. On December 11, on TLC: Tables, Ladders & amp; Chairs, Rousey got revenge against both Flair and Lynch when she pushed them off a ladder during the fight, and also helped Asuka win the SmackDown Women's Championship. Rousey continued her feud with Becky Lynch (who had won the Royal Rumble fight) after the latter chose to challenge her in a title fight at WrestleMania 35. opponent. On the March 4 episode of Raw, Rousey turned her heels for the first time in her career when she cut a promo on fans and attacked both Flair and Lynch. [174] In Fastlane, Lynch faced Flair in a match where if Lynch won, she would be reinstated in the Raw Women's Championship match at WrestleMania. Rousey attacked Lynch during the fight, giving Lynch the disqualification victory and thus the WrestleMania triple threat fight between Rousey's title defense against Lynch and Flair would be the main event of WrestleMania 35, making it the first women's fight to close WrestleMania. [175] At the event, in what was changed to a taking it all for Rousey's Raw and Flair's SmackDown Women's Championships, Lynch controversially pinned Rousey to win both titles. The comment and the production team commented that Rousey was in the ring and said her shoulders were not down for the entire three count and showed a replay of the final stick pointing this fact. Many fans and media were left wondering if this was a legitimate botched finish or if it was booked to end that way. [176] This gave Rousey her first defeat in the WWE and ended her championship regime in 231 days; It would remain the longest reign that Raw Women's Champion to Lynch's own would surpass Rousey's. On December 30, 2020, Rousey told Digital Spy that she didn't like the WWE's travel act. [179] Other ventures, Rousey appeared naked on the cover of ESPN The Magazine's Body Issue in 2012 and in a pictorial deri. In May 2013, Rousey was ranked 29th in the Maxim Hot 100.

Rousey (center, middle row) with other actors at the 2014 Cannes Film Festival, played rousey in The Expendables 3 (2014), and starred herself in the film Entourage. In 2015, Rousey became the first woman on the cover of Australian Men's Fitness to appear on their November issue. In October 2015, Rousey became the first female athlete to host ESPN's SportsCenter. Rousey was on the cover of the January 2016 issue for The Ring magazine and the second woman as well, after Cathy Davis in 1978. In February 2016, she appeared in body paint as one of three cover performers on the cover of the Sports Illustrated Swimsuit Issue. In 2016, Rousey appeared in episode 2, episode 20 of Blindspot, which starred Devon Penberthy, a prison inmate serving time for transporting guns across state lines. [189] A number of actors have been developed for Rousey, including an adaptation of her autobiography My Fight / Your Fight at Paramount, [190] the Athena Project on Warner Bros., [190] the Peter Berg-directed action film Mile 22. Rousey was due to star in a remake of the 1989 Patrick Swayze action drama Road House. Road House would have marked its biggest acting job to date. According to Variety, Rousey reached out to Swayze's widow, Lisa Niemi, to ask for her blessing, which Niemi gave. In 2016, the Road House project was cancelled. On July 28, 2018, Rousey was confirmed as one of the two pre-order bonus grades for the wwe 2K19 video game (the wrestling veteran Rey Mysterio). [194] [195] She has previously appeared in the EA Sports UFC 2 and EA Sports UFC 3 January 2019, it was confirmed that Rousey would vote for Sonya Blade in the video game Mortal Kombat on August 11, 2019, it was revealed that Rousey is acting as a recurring character Lena Bosko in the third season of FOX's 9-1-1 series. [198] During her first day of shooting, she injured two fingers after her left hand got stuck in a boat door. The tip of her ring finger was broken while her middle finger was broken with her tendon almost cut. Rousey was rushed to the hospital, where her middle finger was repaired with a metal plate and screws. On February 20, 2020, Rousey announced her first stream on Facebook Gaming and donated all streaming profits to charity. In 2017, Rousey lives in Venice, California. Rousey went vegan after Beijing in 2008, [2003] [2003] [2003] but in 2012 she described her diet as a kind of blend between a Paleo and a Warrior diet, trying to eat everything organically. Rousey has previously discussed how she struggled with her body image. She explained: When I was at school, martial arts made you a dork, and I became self-conscious that I was too masculine. I was a 16-year-old girl with ringworm and cauliflower ears. People made fun of my arms and called me Miss Man. It wasn't until I got older that I realized: these people are idiots. I'm amazing. Rousey is an avid fan of Dragon Ball Z and Pokémon. Her favorite Pokémon is Mew and she had a childhood crush on Vegeta. [206] Christopher Sabat, the English voice actor in Vegeta, jokingly replied in an interview: She has seen my level of power for what it is ... She scares me too. [107] She also plays World of Warcraft, primarily as a night-time hunter. In 2015, she raised money by auctioning signed T-shirts for the Black Jaguar-White Tiger Foundation, whose goal is to save big cats from circuses and zoos and give them the best lifestyle. In April 2015, Rousey visited Yerevan in Armenia for the 100th anniversary of the Armenian genocide memorial. Rousey supported Bernie Sanders' 2016 U.S. presidential election. In August 2015, Rousey was rumored to be in a relationship with UFC fighter Travis Browne, who knocked out Schaub in a fight the year before, after a photo of the two of seeing each other. Browne was still married at the time and under investigation by the UFC after Webb publicly accused him of domestic violence in July 2015. Browne confirmed that he and Rousey were dating in October 2015. In 2017, Rousey and Browne married in the state of Browne, Hawaii. In her autobiography, My Fight, Your Fight, Rousey wrote about an incident with a former boyfriend she called Snappers McCreepy after she discovered he had taken nude photos of her without her consent or knowledge, two weeks before her first fight with Miesha Tate. When a seething Rousey met him, she punched him across the face so hard [her] hand hurt. According to Rousey met him, she punched him across the face so hard [her] hand hurt. According to Rousey met him, she punched him across the face so hard [her] hand hurt. According to Rousey met him, she punched him across the face with two punches, one more punch, one knee, and then threw him aside on the kitchen floor. She went to her car and he followed, grabbed the steering wheel, then she dragged him out onto the sidewalk, and left him twisted there. Rousey deleted the photos and deleted her hard drive, but fears that the photos may still be out there influenced her to pose for ESPN magazine's Body Issue so nude photos of her would be seen on her own terms. Rousey received some criticism for her abuse at home.
