False identity 5e

You've always had a way to connect with people. You know what makes them tick, you can annoy the desires of their hearts after a few minutes of conversation, and with a few leading questions you can read them as if they were children's books. This is a useful talent that you are totally willing to use to your advantage. You know what people want and deliver, or rather you promise to deliver. Common sense should steer people away from things that sound too good to be true, but common sense seems to be in dissason when you're around. A bottle of pink liquid is sure to cure this inconspicuous rash, this ointment – nothing more than a little fat with a sprinkle of silver dust can restore youth and vigor, and in the city there is a bridge that is simply for sale. These miracles sound implausible, but you make them sound like a real bargain.
