Woman with a parasol in the park

French: La Femme ' l'ombrelle — Madame Monet et son filsArtistClaude MonetYear1875TypeOilOilMediumCanvasDimensions100 cm × 81 cm (39 in × 32 in)LocationNational Gallery of Art, Washington, DC Woman with a Parasol - Madame Monet and Her Son, sometimes as Known The Stroll (French: La Promenade) is an oil painting by Claude Monet from 1875. The impressionist work shows his wife Camille Monet and their son Jean Monet between 1871 and 1877, when they lived in Argenteuil, and captures a moment on a walk on a windy summer day. [1] Description Monet's light, spontaneous brush play creates splashes of color. Ms. Monet's veil is blown by the wind, as is her waving white dress; the waving grass of the meadow echoes from the green underside of its parasol. It is seen as seen from below, with a strong upward perspective, against fluffy white clouds in an azure sky. A boy, the Monets' seven-year-old son, is laid further away, hidden behind a rise in the ground and only visible from the waist up, creating a sense of depth. The work is a genre painting of an everyday family scene, not a formal portrait. The work was painted outdoors, en plein air, and fast, probably in a single period of a few hours[1] It measures 100 × 81 centimeters (39 × 32 in), Monet's largest work in the 1870s, and is signed Monet 75 in the lower right corner. History The painting was one of 18 works by Monet exhibited in the second impressionist exhibition in April 1876 in the gallery of Paul Durand-Ruel. Ten years later, Monet returned to a similar theme and painted a pair of scenes with the daughter of his second wife Suzanne Monet in 1886 with a parasol on a meadow in Giverny; they are located in the Musée d'Orsay. John Singer Sargent saw the painting in the exhibition in 1876 and was later inspired to create a similar painting, Two Girls with Parasols in Fladbury, in 1889. Legacy The painting is one of Monet's most famous and revered works and of Impressionism as a whole. [2] Mary Mathews Gedo in Monet and His Muse: Camille Monet in the Artist's Life said it was of high quality and had a powerful effect. [4] artchive.com described it as a masterpiece, That triumphs wonderfully when it comes to conveying the feeling of a snapshot in time[5] Mary Tompkins Lewis in Critical Readings in Impressionism and Post-Impressionism: An Anthology said it was his greatest and most imposing painting of the decade, not just haunting, deeply introspective [6] cmonetgallery.com viewed it as representative of Monet and Impressionism in many ways, and that Monet viewed it as representative of Monet and Impressionism in many ways. that had been done. [3] Provenance Monet sold the painting in November 1876 to Georges de Bellio Monet's homeopath, who was regularly paid for in Monet's paintings. It was inherited by de Bellio's daughter Victorine and Husband Ernest Donop de Monchy, acquired by Georges Menier in Paris, and sold in 1965 to Paul Mellon and his wife Bunny Mellon. In 1983 he donated the painting to the National Gallery of Art in Washington, DC.
