I try it on squeaking suspension (when hitting bumps) by spraying it on struts and it really works after a night of schedule. Comment » Click to show spoiler - click to hide again... Cars are mainly made of 3 types of materials, mainly steel, rubber and plastic. The rubber parts will fail first the rubber parts there to seal the oil that keeps the parts moving smoothly and put into dampen vibrations and to keep joints moving. From steering racks, arm joints, motor mounting, cross frame liner, suspension struts, belts are all made of rubber. The rubber will lose its stretching, watering, hardening and cracking after a few years. All cars behave like after 6 years because all the tires are failing. When it starts to dry and leave, suspending the car and handling itself won't feel like it's new, it feels like a boat cuz bush may be small and certainly your repair bills pile up significantly. Any funny squeaking sound will also come out, because of the shrinking of the rubber already, so this product is absorbed into the hard rubber and it is elastic again.Only FYI, this product can also be poured into the engine, gearbox, steering wheel to rejuvenate the gasket and rubber seal to prevent oil leakage.Again where there is oil, the rubber used to seal it. And the tires definitely broke after a few years.List all the rubber parts » Click to show spoiler - click again to hide... «1. If it can protect tires and bushes then it can save most of the maintenance ordering a bottle of shopee, is to wait until squeak or too many years before changing because the tires are already dry and cracked then no point d.before it's hard to apply it to soften the back. Some ppl even spray it onto the steering rack and other parts that leak oil from hard rubber seals. Any rubber parts are sure to be dry and hard to use over the years and heat, especially in our hot climate dlvN4j6XzrA This has been edited by AllnGap: May 2 2019, 10:50 AM Like Quotes Reply Remnant_T April 24 2019, 02:03 PM Views by This Member Only | IPv6 | Post #6 New Member QUOTE(AllnGap @ Apr 24 2019, 11:03 AM)It's viable, I've seen many YouTube video where they soak harden rubber to rejuvante it. I now have used it on my dashboard and plastic covers outside my car. This will create a layer of shiny oil on the surface like when you use water to clear your dash. except it doesn't dry out like water. It's definitely worth it I've gone through hundreds of reviews on Amazon, one of the big is that the man never run the engine after shedding. The chemicals go into the oil pan and soften the color. The color got blocked in the oil filter GG overhaul engine if you want to put into the engine should make sure you run it after shedding it.Then 2-3 days later do the service so basically drain everything.
