Today is the day I can share an exciting project I'm working on behind the scenes. The stair makeover has been in my head for a while, and when I came up with Cap A Tread Laminate Stair covers from The Home Depot, I was inspired to get started. I was able to manage this project in DIY style, with the help of my two teenage boys. It was a lot of fun working on it and I loved sharing my passion for projects at home with them. Before I share the process and all the tricks I learned during the project, let me show you the dramatic transformation... (Before) (After) Cap A stair coverings are available in tons of different colors. This makes it easier to find a color that aligns with other wood or laminate flooring. My local Home Depot doesn't carry all the available stair tread colors in the store (most needed to be ordered), so I had to be a little creative to find the right shade. I realized that I didn't carry many temporary pieces (T moldings, stair noses) in different colors, so I bought a pair and brought it home to use as colored patterns. Once I had the swatches narrowed down to two, I ordered two stairs to make sure that the perfect color was locked down before the full order. When the two pattern stairs came in, it was immediately obvious to me which one was my favorite... I'm Highland Hickory. It's almost perfect for fitting the floors into my living and dining room, all of which are adjacent to my hallway. I had the opportunity to buy hatches in the same Highland Hickory finish, but I decided to go with the white primed hatches so I could paint them with cream to match my trim for contrast. Before I begin, I did some quick research on the installation process. I found two videos that were extremely useful. They did exactly every step so well that after watching them I was 100% sure I could handle this project. I'm not a professional Carpenter, Builder or entrepreneur, but I have basic knowledge of the tools needed for the project and a huge DIY spirit. The first video I this is one of home depot and the second video is this zamma. I highly recommend watching both videos in their entirety. They provide important information about product measurement, cutting, and installation. There are two types of Cap A staircase coverings; Types 1 and 2. Standard Cap A tread (Type 1) covers stairs tread that are 1 or less thick. If the thickness of the stair surface is 1.125-1.750 thick, you need to order the Type 2 Cap A tread. I pulled the carpet and cushioned it back into a striking corner and measured the plywood tread underneath. My stairs needed a type 2 type A tread. Cap A steps and Cap A tread hatches are available in different lengths. The easiest way to make sure you order the right size is to measure your stairs and take these measurements with you when placing your order at your local Home Depot. My colleague was very helpful and even made a great suggestion to order a few pieces like what I actually needed just in case I made cutting errors (which I did to make one). Just make sure you are aware of any reinstallation fees since this product is considered in a special order. I just brought the boys on board. They handled the demo and the preparation like absolute pros. I introduced these tools... hammers, scrapers, pliers, flat screwdrivers and goggles. Together, with these tools, removed the old carpet and bench next to the tack tape, staples, and nails of plywood tread and hatches. They are also vacuumed thoroughly, a very important step to ensure the adhesive's adhesion. Cap Tread installation The tools/supplies needed to install the Cap A tread system were; a table saw, a sliding compound heron saw, Heavy Duty Liquid Nails, a tape measure, a T Bevel, and a brad nailer with angles (if you want to nail the boards, as suggest in the Zamma video). According to the instructions, the installation of the Cap A tread system should start at the bottom and go to climbing, tread, climbing, tread, tread, etc. until the entire staircase is complete. It is recommended that each climber and stairway be measured and cut individually, piece by piece, as they are installed. This is because most stairwells are not 100%, and there will also be all stairs ascending and ever stepping steps of exactly the same length. I made a video showing the process I used to measure, cut and install the stairs and steps. You will notice in the video when I measured the tread, I used a T Bevel tool in the corner of each tread. This is because the stairwell did not have plumb, and this tool helped to find the angles needed to make a nice close fit with little or no shortcomings. Check out the installation here: Here's a quick plug in of the steps... The measured height and width of the take-off. Reassigned measurements to the rising. forks. with the nore saw. Use the table saw to cut the ascent to height. Applied Heavy Duty Liquid Nails to the back of the rising. Pushed up in place. Measured width and depth of the tread. He found nails in every corner using a T bevel. T bevel angles with the cutter saw for tread cuts. With the help of the table saw, treads should be cut to a depth. Applied Heavy Duty Liquid Nails to the tread. He pushed the tread into place. (You can be sure brad nails are very back if needed). He let the glue cure him, and then he touched my gray mural... I finished the project painting the hatches in the same custom cream color that I could trim all over my home. Here it is, it's all done! Here's a look before and after each other. This project has made a huge difference in our little lobby! Thank you for stopping by and letting me share this project with you. Before you go, did you check out my E Design service?
