CBS News Radio produces hourly news for hundreds of radio stations, and also oversees CBS News podcasts such as The Takeout Podcast. CBS News also operates ABSN's 24-hour digital news network. CBS News' president and senior executive producer is Susan Zirinsky, who assumed the role on March 1, 2019. [1] Zirinsky, the first female president of the network's news division, [2][3] was announced as the option to replace David Rhodes on January 6, 2019. [5] The announcement comes amid news that Rhodes will step down as president of CBS News amid falling ratings and the fallout from revelations from investigations of sexual misconduct against CBS News figures and Rhodes. [6] History In 1929, CBS began making regular radio news releases—a five-minute summary taken from a report from the United Press, one of three wire services supplying newspapers with national news. In December 1930 CBS chief William S. Paley hired journalist Paul W. White of the United Press as CBS news editor. Paley puts radio network news operations at the same level as entertainment, and is authorized White to disrupt if an event is guaranteed. Along with other networks, CBS chafed on breaking news embargoes imposed on radios by wire service, which prevents them from using bulletin bulletins they first appear in print. CBS ignored the embargo when it broke the story of Lindbergh's kidnapping in 1932, using live reporting in the air. The radio network scook print channels with news of the 1932 U.S. presidential election. [7]:485-486 In March 1933, White was named vice president and general manager in charge of the news at CBS. [8] As the first leader of CBS News, he began building an organisation that soon established a legendary reputation. [7]:486 In 1935, White hired Edward R. Murrow, and sent him to London in 1937 to carry out the CBS Radio Europe operation. [7]:486 White leads the next staff to include Charles Collingwood, William L. Shirer, Eric Sevareid, [9] Bill Downs, John Charles Daly, Joseph C. Harsch [7]:501 Cecil Brown, Elmer Davis, Quincy Howe, H. V. Kaltenborn, Robert Trout, [10] and Lewis Shollenberger. [11] CBS got its duck in a row for the biggest news story in history, World War II, writes radio historian John Dunning. [7]:487 Television When it became the commercial station WCBW (channel 2, now WCBS-TV) in 1941, the pioneer of the CBS television station in New York City broadcast two daily news programs, at 2:30 and 7:30 p.m.m. working day, anchored by Richard Hubbell. Most of the news releases featured Hubbell reading the script with only occasional cutaways to the map or still posing. When Pearl Harbor was bombed on December 7, 1941, WCBW (which was usually off-air on Sunday to give engineers a day off), took the air at 8:45 p.m.m with extensive special reports. The national emergency even broke the unquestionable wall between CBS radio and television. WCBW executives convinced radio announcers and experts such as George Fielding Elliot and Linton Wells to get off to the Grand Central studio in the evening and provide information and comments on the attack. WCBW's special report that night lasted less than 90 minutes. But the special broadcast rejected live television limits in 1941 and opened up new possibilities for future broadcasts. As CBS wrote in a special report to the FCC, the unscheduled live news posted on December 7 is unquestionable the most stimulating challenge and marks the greatest progress of any single problem faced until that time. Additional news is scheduled in the early days of the war. In May 1942, WCBW (like almost all television stations) cut back the live program schedule and news releases were cancelled, since the station temporarily suspended its studio operations, using exclusively for occasional movie broadcasts. This is mainly because most staff have joined the service or have been transferred to research related to the war, and to prolong the life of an unstable early camera that is now impossible to repair due to the lack of division wartime. Douglas Edwards on CBS news set in 1952. In May 1944, when the war began Siding with the Allies, WCBW reopened the studio and the newscast again, briefly anchored by Ned Calmer, and later by Everett Holles. [12] After the war, an expanded news program appeared on the WCBW schedule - whose subpoena was exchanged to WCBS-TV in 1946 - first anchored by Milo Boulton, and then by Douglas Edwards began anchoring CBS Television News, a 15-minute nightly newscast on CBS television networks, including WCBS-TV. It airs weekly at 7:30 a.m. .m., and is the first of its kind scheduled, a network television news program featuring anchors (Lowell Thomas NBC's WNBT—now WNBC—for a time in the early 1940s and Richard Hubbell who was previously called, Ned Calmer, Everett Holles and Milo Boulton on WCBW in the early and mid-1940s, but this is a local television Newsreel (which aired in February 1948), was simply a recording of a film with a sound history. In 1950, the name of the nightly news was exchanged to Douglas Edwards for News, and the following year, it became the first news program to be broadcast on both coasts, thanks to a new coaxial cable connection, prompting Edwards to use everyone's Good Night greeting, coast to coast. It was renamed the CBS Evening News when Walter Cronkite replaced Edwards in 1962. [13] Edwards remained with CBS News with various daytime television and radio newscasts until his retirement on April 1, 1988. The history of broadcasting Information about the programs listed in this section came directly from CBS News in an interview with Vice President of Communications and NewsWatch Dallas. According to CBS News Library and source Sandy Genelius (Vice President, CBS News Communications), the CBS Evening News is the program's headline for Saturday and Sunday afternoon broadcasts. The program's title for Sunday night news beginning in 1963 was CBS Sunday Night News. These headers are also seen in the program airs on Saturdays, and Sunday nights from 7:00 - 7:30 PM UTC (Eastern Time) on CBS. CBS News bulletins include John F. Kennedy's assassin. CBS News Radio Main Article: CBS News Radio Branch of CBS News that produces news and features to radio stations is CBS News Radio. The radio network was CBS's oldest unit and tracked its roots to the company's establishment in 1927, and the news division took shape for decades that followed. The CBS News correspondent list (below) includes those reporting on CBS News Radio. CBS News Radio produced the oldest daily news show on radio or television, CBS World News Roundup, which was first broadcast in 1938 and celebrated its 80th anniversary in 2018. The World News Roundup airs twice daily: the morning edition anchored by Steve Kathan and produced by Paul Farry, while the late edition anchored by Dave Barrett and produced by James Hutton. The evening roundup, previously known as The World Tonight, has been broadcast in its current form since 1956 and was anchored by Blair Clark, Douglas Edwards, Dallas Townsend and Christopher Glenn (Glenn also anchored the morning round before his death in 2006). CBS Radio Network provides news releases at the top of the clock, updates fixed on : 31 minutes past the clock, newsfeeds popular for affiliates (including WCBS and KYW) at : 35 minutes past the clock, and break the news updates when developments guarantee, often at : 20 and : 50 minutes past the clock. Skyview Networks handles distribution. CBS Newspath's CBS Newspath is CBS News' satellite news collection service (similar to CNN). Newspath provides national hard news, sports highlights, regional venue news, features and live coverage of major break-up news events for affiliate station use in their local news releases. This service domestic and global correspondent troops an independent newspaper dedicated to reporting for members of the association, and offering several different national or international stories faced by the newser on a daily day. CBS Newspath also relies heavily on the sharing content of local allies. Stations will often contribute local recordings that may be in the country's interest. It replaces the same service, CBS NewsNet. Network News Service (NNS) is a pioneering news organization formed by ABC NewsOne, CBS Newspath and Fox NewsEdge. Launched in June 2000, its subscriber list already includes more than 500 ABC, CBS and Fox allies across the United States. The three news distributors created NNS to source an effective cost pool to develop and deliver second-rate news stories and b-roll recordings. The goal is to realize cost savings in the creation and distribution of these news images, while member news organizations and television stations continue to grow freely and deliver their own signature coverage of top news stories. Launched on April 15, 2015 on Freeview, it is channel 5's multiplex channel and the local version of American cable channel Spike. It mainly broadcasts entertainment programs, including action and drama series, police documentaries, and programming from its American counterparts, as well as mixed martial arts. On January 7, 2020, the series was discontinued, with Paramount Network considering channel placement and programming. Following Viacom's takeover of Channel 5, it has been reported that a local version of the U.S. channel spike will be launched in the end of 2014, with the channel reserved to replace Viva on Freeview. [1] The channel was operated under channel 5 managing director Ben Frow; from Spike's line, he described the service as a driven, high-energy channel that offered a viewpoint and a mix of programmes I think are different from anything else on British TV right now. [1] Spike was launched on April 15, 2015 on freeview channel 31, explaining 5USA; although it was originally announced that Spike would replace Viva completely in Viva instead transferred to different channels and reduced to two hours a day to conserved bandwidth for Spike, with 5USA taking channel alahan. [3] [4] [5] Between his first programmes, the premiere of Police Interceptors Unleashed was seen by 137,000 viewers. [7] On October 31, 2017, Spike was re-branded as 5Spike to more closely associate himself with his sister channel and the Channel 5 brand. A British version of Spike's replacement in the US, Paramount Network, was launched on 4 July 2018. [8] On January 7, 2020, 5Spike was shut down, with Paramount Network holding its channel positions on Freeview, Sky (including +1 timeshift channels) and Virgin Media, and bringing several former network programs. [9] Channel Line programming draws primarily from original programs produced by its U.S. peers, including Catch Contractors and Lip Sync Battle among others. The channel also broadcast imported U.S. dramas, from modern dramas such as Breaking Bad (especially marking the first time the entire series will be broadcast by British television; only the first two seasons were shown by Fox and 5 USA, with the tray available via Netflix), Children's Anarchy, Terminator: The Sarah Connor Chronicles and The Walking Dead, to classics, A-Team and Knight Rider. Spike also brought british productions, such as The Unleashed Policy Interceptors (a spin-off of the Channel 5 series), [7] and repeated several Channel 5 fact programmes. [11] As in the art of U.S. mixed martial arts, [12] it also consists of part of Spike's lineup, with the British TV rights to Bellator MMA and, under a long-term agreement, exclusive rights to BAMMA shows starting with BAMMA 20 on April 25, 2015.
