I'm 35 years old, I've divorced three times, and I'm in a riverside van! Chris FarleyMelissa McCarthy (SNL 40 Special) Matthew Matt Foley is a fictional motivational speaker. Matt is an iconic character from Saturday Night Live performed by Chris Farley. The character was created by Bob Odenkirk, although Farley appeared in other comedy groups before becoming a cast member on SNL. Character information[edit | edit source] Basically Foley was very much the antithesis of a good motivational speaker: abrasive, loud, clumsy and down on his luck. Farley named the character after one of his Marquette University rugby union colleagues of the same name who is currently in the U.S. Army as a Roman Catholic chaplain. In the final months of Farley's life, a film version of the character was planned with David Spade in a supporting role. Summary[edit | edit source] Foley appeared in eight Saturday Night Live sketches. Each sketch usually started with Foley being put into a certain situation by someone who could talk to the group. In addition to appearing disheveled, overweight, and unstylish, he'll scream, discredit, display cynicism, and give a distinctly negative motivational message. Foley's trademark line warned his audience that, like him, they could turn 35 years old, divorced three times, and live in a van downstream! When members of his audience claimed all sorts of accomplishments, he answered sarcastic Well, la-dee-freakin'-da! or similar remarks. Sketches often include Foley giving wildly exaggerated gestures and falling (or jumping) on a piece of furniture, destroying it or injuring himself in the process. This practice began when, in the character's first appearance, Farley accidentally fell on a coffee table that was part of the set, not on the return table, demolishing it in the process. David Spade and Christina Applegate, who played teenagers allegedly in need of Foley's help, had to cover up their own laughter. Spade in particular spent most of the sketch with his hand on his lips. At the end of each sketch, he usually quickly grazed out of his speaking place where the people left would be tempted together and comment on him, usually amazed and fearful. While his speeches have always been repeated, the final results would usually be successful because the audience did not want to be associated with Foley. Outside SNL[edit | edit source] Farley portrayed Matt Foley at the Rose Bowl in 1994, giving comedic motivational speeches to the Wisconsin Badgers football team. He was a Madison, Wisconsin native.) His speech apparently worked: Wisconsin defeated UCLA 21-16. Appearance Dates[edit | edit source] Lines[edit | editing source] Foley (Introduction): Let's start with the fact that you give a little script about what's going on in my life. First, I'm 35 years old. I'm divorced three times, and I live in a riverside van! Foley (Repeated Line): I live in a riverside van! Foley (Repeating line): Well, la-dee-freakin'-da! Foley: I don't know? Well that and nickel will get you a nice hot jack-squat cup! Foley: You kids, you probably say to yourself, Now I'm going to go out and I'm going to go out and wrap it around pulling it and put it in my pocket! Well, I'm here to say that you're probably going to figure out how out there that you're not going to equal the jack squat! You're going to end up eating a steady diet of government cheese and living in a van down the river! Foley: You'll have plenty of time to live in a van downstream when (stops to think) you're livin' in a van downstream! Foley: Now the kids are probably asking themselves, (He starts furiously pumping his arms) Hey Matt, how can we get back on track? Foley (on a bike): All right, all right, I'll pedal! Let everyone pedal everyone, make Evan happy! Let's get started pedaling away! All right, you're on your way! Look to the right; it's your first wife, Linda! High tail it from there because you owe it three years of alimony! Continue pedaling. All right, let's pull into Seven-Eleven and buy a microwave burrito! Okay, we're back on the road, there's your son's dorm! Let's sneak in, steal his student loan check, cash, and go lookin' for Asian prostitutes! Because if there's one thing Matt likes, it's Hong Kong! fuey, ha-ha! Oh yes! Foley: There used to be a boy who liked to throw things. He started throwing eggs. Then he threw a big game. He then threw back a shot of whiskey. Then he threw himself. Then he was kicked out of the house and then moved into a van downstream! David Spade's Character: Matt, we were just havin' a little fun. Foley: So you had a good time. How do you think eggs felt? Hey, let's find out! I will be you, and you will be eggs. What does it sound like? (receives son #1) Hey look at it! I'm going to throw some eggs around! Look at me go! (Falls backwards on the table.) Jay Mohr's Character: Señor Foley, where can you study Spanish, Taco Bell? Foley: Muy cómico. ¡Dios freakin' mío! Venezuelan father: Señor Foley, if it's a help to you, both my kids speak perfect English. Foley: Dad, kindly close your damn flanhole! Foley: ¡Viva de Nueva York, es Sábado Noche! (Translation: Lives from New York, it's Saturday night!) Foley: Twas the night before Christmas, and all by vanYour ol'buddy Matt fell asleep Cans. The children were located two time zones with his first wife and husband in sunny LA Matt woke up and realized with a chill and quiver,That was livin' in the van down the river! Foley: You'll doin' a lot of doobie rollin' when you live in a van downstream! Hulu Videos[edit | edit source] Trivia[edit | edit source] Chris Farley and David Spade plan to make a movie base with this character. Unfortunately, Farley died before they started making the film. Farley reveals in interviews that he had resisted character from his own father. When Matt comes back to talk to the kids after they throw eggs into their Halloween homes, he says, I'm an eggman. Koo Koo Ca Choo. It is a reference to the Beatles song I Am The Eggman from their album Magical Mystery Tour.
