Jane Pittman celebrates her 100th birthday in 1962. He lives in the old slave apartments on a plantation outside Baton Rouge, Louisiana. When Quentin Lerner, a reporter from the East, comes to get her she obliges with the story of her life. Jane remembers her experiences as a slave during the Civil War; the experience of re-nomification one year before the Emancipation Declaration; Her abortive journey to freedom in Ohio. her years working as a field hand; short period of happiness as the wife of Joe Pittman, a black cowboy; her grief over the murder of Ned, a teacher who tried to set up a black school in the early 1900s. and her mixed feelings about black activism in the civil rights movement. Jane endures the misery and hardship that come her way repeatedly over the years. Her story reveals the persistence of racial bias, evident in the acts of murderous violence that take away loved ones and the condescending attitudes of plantation owners that serve most of her life. However, somehow Jane finds a favor, a certain charm, that makes most of the simple pleasures. Her autobiography is a chronicle of quiet heroism. That’s why on a day in 1962, when she makes her final and convincing stand for freedom, her act has all the emotional power and says impact of a century of preparation. Ernest J. Gaines wrote Miss Jane Pittman’s autobiography in 1971 and meant it was an archetypal life that includes the black experience in America from the end of the Civil War to the genesis of the civil rights movement. Winner of nine Emmy Awards, including outstanding drama of the season from 1973 to 1974, this was one of the most acclaimed television films of all time. Cicely Tyson is memorable in the lead role; Also good at supporting roles are Odetta, Arnold Wilkerson, Beatrice Winde, Rod Perry, Thalmus Rasmusulala and Michael Murphy. John Korty directs a screenplay by Tracy Keenan Wynn based on Gaines’s novel. It takes a lifetime to learn about the heights and depths of freedom. Like love, it is a quality of the soul difficult to capture with words. This animated film pays tribute to the high value of freedom by celebrating the human spirit. In February 1962, as the civil rights movement arrived in Bayonne, Louisiana, a New York journalist arrived to interview Jane Pittman, who had just turned 110. She tells him her story dating back to her earliest memories before the job was over. Among the chapters of her life, today’s Black games in Bayonne, at Jimmy’s urging, are dramatized. Jane Pittman Timeline Description: Jane Pittman is a fictional character in Miss Jane Pittman’s autobiography. This novel tells the story of the life of a 110-year-old African-American woman who was born into slavery, and is still alive at the time of the Civil Rights Movement. 1850 Birth of Jane Pittman (Early 1850s) Jane Pittman was born into slavery in the early 1850s 1850s. Her name was Thisi at birth. 1864 A union soldier gave Tacey the name Jane A union soldier, Corporal Brown, tells 10-year-old Tacey that Tacey is a slave name. He named her Jane Brown. She was later beaten when she announced her name was Jane Brown. 1865 Master Bryant Reads Emancipation Proclamation About two years after the Proclamation, Jane’s teacher finally tells his slaves the Emancipation Proclamation. 27 June 1865 Adoption of the 13th Amendment 1865 extract of the 13th Amendment officially abolished slavery. Conditions for many slaves did not improve immediately. August 11, 1865 Slaughter Jane, an orphan, and other freed slaves leave the plantation, led by Big Laura. A group of white patrol men attack the group as they head north. Laura and her baby are killed, but Laura’s young son, Ned, survives. Jane continued to raise Ned as her own. Jane was hoping to get to Ohio and Corporal Brown. August 15, 1865 She moved to the New Plantation After traveling with Ned for a short time, Jane accepted that she would not do it in Ohio and took the job as a field hand in Mr. Bone’s plantation. Jane worked at the plantation for the next 10 to 12 years. September 13, 1873 Ned moved Ned, now an adult, moved out of the house in September 1873. He had clashed with local white power groups, most likely the Ku Klux Klan, and was in danger. He moved to Kansas to avoid the danger presented, and later joined the army. 1873 Jane Married Joe Pittman After Ned left, Jane married Joe Pittman. Together, the two moved to a ranch near the Texas-Louisiana border, where Joe got a job. June 8, 1876 Joe Pittman died in June 1876, Joe died, trying to retrieve a loose stallion. July 27, 1898 Ned and his family came to the house Ned came home with his family, including his wife and three children. He started building a school, and he taught equal ideas. July 26, 1899 Ned Died Local whites were threatened by Ned's teachings. They hired a Katsun, Albert Uluvo, to shoot and kill Ned. He did, and Ned died only a year after his return. March 17, 1912 Death of Albert Cliveau When Cliveau lay dying, Jane told him the chariot of hell was coming for him. He died of fear and pain, tormented by his actions. March 11, 1920 Moved to Samson Plantation In March 1920, Jane moved to Samson Plantation. There, he comes into contact with both whites and African-Americans who question racial norms and beliefs. August 20, 1921 Jane Found Religion Jane had a religious experience or vision in August 1921. He was already almost 70 years old. August 12, 1958 Jimmy The One Died A baby named Jimmy was born at samson plantation and many on the plantation recognized him as a possible civil rights leader. He grew up to lead the people of the community as a civil rights leader. He was shot and killed in a protest. August 17, 1958 Jane Led Civil Rights Protest Only days after Jimmy's death, Jane led people in her community to join a civil rights in his name. Jane is, right now, over 100 years old. In 1962 Jane told her story in 1962, Jane told the story of her life. Jane Pittman Pittman Timeline
