From current accounts and debit cards to savings products to checkout services, we help customers manage their daily financial lives. We help families buy their first house or car. We provide funding for businesses, large and small, to expand and hire. We help our customers plan and save for retirement. We support our communities. Some call it Main Street. We believe that this community-based approach to financial services allows us to serve our customers in the best possible way and sets us apart from other big banks. Community based community we mean that we are not just a bank that happens to be in the community; We're a community bank. We're in and out of every community we do business in, whether it's Columbia, South Carolina; Des Moines, Iowa; roseville, California. And we're in more American communities than any of our competitors. We all identify with our communities and are geographically proud of where we live and where we come from. This is my town. This is my state. As part of our work to find what's best for each of our customers, we think about what's best for our communities - where we live and work, pay taxes, raise families, educate children, buy groceries, and support local nonprofits. First we're local, then we're national. We weren't born as a national bank, which then decided to be local. We were born as a local bank in one community that does business on Main Street, and then we grew into a family of many local banks in many communities. Every segment of the industry we do business in - including banking, mortgage, investment and insurance - has started in the neighborhood and city and has become national, not the other way around. Out-of-local nationals and out-of-state locals® Since we are local and national at the same time, we say we want to out-local state and out-national locals. This We look like a national bank, but we act like a smaller bank. This means that customers know the local cashier by name, and cashiers refer customers to the global world of financial products and services. Out-of-national locals means we need to offer better products, more channels, excellent technology, and a wider product line than smaller local competitors. Out-of-local nationals means that we stay closer to our customers than any national competitor in our communities; understand the needs of our local customers; and we provide professional, personalized and timely services based on first name. We offer our retail customers the largest and most convenient distribution system in our industry. We have more than 8,600 branches and 13,000 ATMs. Our customers call our phone banks hundreds of millions of times a year. As the first U.S. bank to offer online banking, we provide products through our online and digital channels to meet the financial needs of each of our customers, including consumers, small businesses, mid-market companies, and large corporations. We want our digital services to be known as the best and most itegrated trusted gateway for our customers' financial services. We have three main customer segments: individuals, small businesses and large businesses. We have five main business groups: Community Banking; Wealth and investment management; Consumer loans; Payments, virtual solutions and innovation; wholesales banking. Our corporate headquarters is in San Francisco, but we believe our real head quarter is where our customers are. Likewise, our talents and resources are widely dispersed. We have significant hubquarters employment and expertise in many large metro areas, including Charlotte, Boston, New York, Atlanta, Philadelphia, Miami, Chicago, Des Moines, St. Louis, Minneapolis-Saint Paul, Phoenix, Denver, Los Angeles, and Houston. Many of our products and services are ranked No. 1, 2 or 3 in the US. For example, we are No. 1 in the number of retail bank locations, origination and service of home mortgages, small business loans, commercial real estate loans, auto lending and debit cards. We're number two in private student loans. And we are no. 3 among full-service retail brokerage providers. For a full list of how we rank, see the latest edition of Wells Fargo Today facts on wells Fargo.com. Rankings like these are important measures not because they show how big we are, but because they show how well we meet our customers' financial needs.
