Sissy breathes true life into the characters in her reading. What other book could you compare To kill a mockingbird to and why? Nothing I've read can be compared to this exceptional story of this genre. What about Sissy Spacek's performance? Sissy Spacek read the novel so confidently from the narrator that it's hard to believe she's not talking directly to you. Have you had an extreme reaction to this book? Did it make you laugh or cry? Don't listen to this story while shopping for groceries, or if you do, head to the produce section and pretend the onions are coming to you and not the emotions of the story. Any additional comments?
