But for you, it seems your car has been exceeded by a semi lined with train spikes. It's not worth taking in a ball shop, but still, the rage will drive you nuts. What's the solution? Ask your dealer specialist or collision specialist for the Mopar® Lacquer Touch-Up Paint. Maybe you're thinking: Why should I go to a specialist finding Paint Mopar? I spend an auto shop every day. To answer this question, let's look at the experiences of Customer A, who went to a collision dealership counter for Mopar Paint, and Client B, which did not. THE CUSTOMER: Got Mopar® Touch-Up Paint from the dealer or collision shop. Receive an exact O.E. color match – from the code on the manufacturer's stickers. Ask the counterperson how to use the product. A collision specialist said it: Clean the surface and remove surface / fat. Shaking the paint really well. Practice on an aluminum case before you use it on the machine. Dap paint on the case and pick up paint from there (instead of pressing pen to paint on the machine). Use multiple light courses vs a heavy one. Let every dress dry between. Use compounds to rub even out the surface. Wait 30 days before it's monitor. End of result: A touch-home-up that looks like it did with a magical line. CUSTOMER B: Was purchased after touch-up paint from the auto supply store. Eye-burning paint colors. Ask the counterperson for the paint and how to use the product, who said, Brush it on the scratch and make sure you wipe it off first. End result: You might have a more apparent reminder of the scratch and fix it could cause more problems.
