August steiner watches review

Great retailers remind you it's back to school, back to work, and back to seasons without so much sun. Before you buy what they sell, consider the nice part of change you can save in August with these smart timely purchases. Every month we look at the chart and list of the best times to buy anything we put together in January and pull out the items you should be on the lookout for that month. Here's a full-size inflatable and cutout of what to watch for this month (click for a bigger view):You always hear about off-season, post-peak times to save money on purchases and food, but it Reads MoreNow, on the best deals you can find throughout August. As always, it's not so much a list of things to Run Out and Buy Now, as much as, Buy It Now, rather than later, if you're in the market. Normally we'll include some whole-season deals, but in the summer the best deals are often toward the tail end - big devices in the post-remodel-season wind-down. Older computers: John Morris of CNET tells MSN Money that July and August can sometimes deliver savings on slightly older computer models as AMD and Intel's release schedules see computer makers ramp up to release new gear around this time of year. Laptops: Per Gizmodo's post, and knowing that's when big-box retailers and direct sellers start piling on with the back-to-school deals. DealNews has a relatively standard laptop-Vista-equipped, 15.4-inch, Core 2 Duo, at least 2GB of... Yahoo! Finance suggests it's also a good time to pick up your camping gear. Kid's Clothing: Because even if you don't have a kid going back to school, you might have a kid for now you can buy gifts. If you have kids, think beyond the immediate fall needs. Wines: Somewhat obvious, sure, but you can also include some hard-to-find, small-run wines in the early fall harvest season, according to SmartMoney.com.Linen and storage containers: They're aimed at the incoming college crowd this time of year, as AOL Shopping suggests, but you don't have to show a college ID to show some things you almost always find yourself in need of We comb the comments from these monthly pieces to see what other deals our readers find during specific months, in hopes of kicking out an upgraded buying guide in 2011. In addition to seeing the of several new shows, August will bring some eye-catching series finales to the small screen. In the next few weeks, some of TV's most exciting shows, from AMC's to The CW's UnREAL, their latest seasons will wrap up. Here are six season finales to tune in on the following month: 1. Atlantis, August 1 Source: BBC America The fantasy drama set in an ancient world of legendary heroes and mythical creatures will air its final episode this month. The UK series, which stars Jack Donnelly and Mark Addy and airs on BBC America in the US, was cancelled earlier this year, after only two seasons. Although the series finale has already aired overseas, BBC America only began televising the last few remaining episodes of the second and final season in June. The season will finally come to a conclusion in early August. 2. Last Tango in Halifax, August 2 Source: PBS The British romantic drama series will air the final episode of its third season this month. The show centers on Alan (Derek Jacobi) and Celia (Anne Reid), who were sweet on each other as teenagers, only to be divorced for 60 years. After both lost their spouses, they are reunited and their unlikely romance has a ripple effect on everyone around them. The show, which premiered on BBC One in 2012, airs on PBS in the US. A fourth season was already green. 3. Making the gang: New York, August 3 Source: AMC AMC's eight-part docudrama detection of the rise of organized crime in America will air its final installment. Narrated by Emmy Award-winning actor Ray Liotta, the show uses archival footage and visual effects to show how notorious figures like Charles Lucky Luciano and Benjamin Bugsy Siegel have transformed from neighborhood gang members to murderous entrepreneurs. The series features interviews with former New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, Drea de Matteo, Joe Mantegna, Frankie Valli, gang attorney and former Las Vegas Mayor Oscar Goodman, and noted writer and historian David Pietrusza among others. 4. Unreal, August 3 Source: The CW The CW's provocative drama gives a fictional behind-the-scenes look at the chaos surrounding the production of a dating competition. It follows executive producer Quinn as she orders her staff to get dramatic and outrageous footage for the show, forcing young producers to manipulate the relationships among the show's contestants. The series received critical acclaim over the course of its first season. In early July, it was picked up for a 10-episode second season, which is expected to air sometime in 2016. 5. People, August 16 Source: AMC The eight-episode freshman season of AMC's sci-fi series will air its series finale this summer. Starring Manpreet Bachu, Emily Berrington, Ruth Bradley, and Lucy Carless, the high-octane thriller series explores the emotional impact of blurring the lines between humans and machines. It kicked off in June to a largely positive reception from critics, who currently have an 86% fresh rating on Rotten Keep. The network has yet to be officially official whether it will return for a second season, but writers Sam Vincent and Jonathan Brackie have revealed that talks for a season two plotline have already begun. 6. Aquarius, August 22 Source: NBC NBC's period crime drama, which kicked off in May after mixed reviews, will wrap up its first season this month. Starring David Duchovny and Grey Damon, the show is set in 1967 Los Angeles and follows two detectives who set out to find a missing teenage girl and eventually come up against Charles Manson and his family, a mostly ragtag group of hippies who follow Manson into drugs, sex, and rock-and-roll. The network renewed the series for a second season earlier this year. More from Entertainment Cheat Sheet: Even if we can't go see our favorite artists playing in person right now, almost every musician out there is playing online concerts for their fans to keep people entertained while we all stay at home. There's no shortage of musical acts performing online every day, so we've compiled a list of all the upcoming live concerts scheduled throughout the rest of this month. Go back on this story because we'll constantly recite it. *Note: All times are listed in Pacific Time (PT), so please adjust accordingly.
