Nov 25, 2020 Version 2.1.1 had a little problem where I accidentally used my exchange weapon they give you to be a new player to limit breaking thinking it was a cool free weapon they gave you. Realized my mistake and that these rainbow weapons are for the exchange for a real weapon ... I have written to Bandai and they regret to inform me that there is nothing they can do. A million-dollar company can do nothing for a new player who was going to spend money and keep playing, but is now completely extinct by that company. I'm not asking for a refund of the money, I'm not asking for a free character or pull weapon, I only asked for them to take back the broken limit that is useless now and let me have the exchange weapon I was supposed to get. They do it on purpose... now I never have the free weapon to which all new players are entitled. I'm sure it's too much to ask for the worlds' largest toy company worth $6.4 billion. I get bored when the game was about the player and not the money. I have no problem paying (and I have) for things in this game. But it was different, it was an honest mistake that would have cost them no money at all to repair. I hate Bandai now. I tried almost every game by Bandai Namco and loved them all, but I have to say this one really takes the Too many games today focus on creating more and more units with the same system and effects, but this game has added breathtaking animations and even made a moving animation to the city with character lines for each character, even when a very popular game like azure lane only made a few actually move and and did the rest with just having lines without movement. Really this game is amazing and enjoyable with its own unique touch to keep the game fun as well as visually appealing. Edit: As far as gameplay goes, I think they nailed the difficulty level too many games let u skip all the beginner content, but in this game players can't just jump to lvl 100 expying and instantly be able to one shot most of the story, u got to think and it gives u time to do it with his basic tour system that I absolutely love I played all 3 SAO games in Bandai and I was never more disappointed than when I played that. I was so excited to play it and even had it pre-ordered, but when after I finished the tutorial, that's when I was dropped the most. This game requires AP to play every step and not only that, you have to play like Kirito. There's nothing wrong with Kirito or his character, it's just the fact that you have to play it in almost every single sao game out there. For console and mobile it does nothing but center it around Kirito, yes I understand that's what a lot of fans like, but I'm sure there are also fans who want to be on the sidelines. In SAOIF you are someone who has accompanied him throughout the main story and can be your own person. Personalization and also free game, you can play for hours without having to wait for the energy to recharge and refuel on things at your own pace. I really like SAO and this is one of my favorite anime, but I don't want to be Kirito every time I turn around. Take For example Pokémon, they allow users not only to have their own story (even if ash is the main person in the entire anime) and even customize their character to their liking. I think the company is focusing too much on Kirito and not what might be available to all fans/players. We are terribly sorry for causing you disappointment with the game's AP system and the main character options. We will sincerely reflect on these issues and keep them in mind for future updates. From now on, we will make our efforts to make a game that all our players can enjoy. If there's anything else you'd like to share with, please let us know.
