Inspired by World War II (2013), Last Shelter Survival puts players in a zombie-filled world. Human civilization has collapsed because of a virus that spreads very quickly. This virus causes people to lose their self-control by becoming more aggressive and crazy. You will play as a commander, trying to survive, rebuild the population, and fight the hideous undead. Last Shelter Survival forces players to build and develop a base in the middle of a lonely desert. It is a temporary safe place because the number of zombies present is not much. As a leader, come up with smart strategies in creating and developing this ultimate base. And, of course, we will need resources to develop the economy. In the last survival shelter, include food, water, gas, electricity, wood and iron. These are the main resources of any economy. Resources will assess the well-being of the base. If you have abundant resources, strong financial resources, your headquarters works effectively. Infrastructure in the game will be built at the expense of resources. They are closely related to each other. This requires players to come up with an extremely clever strategy. If you want to build or upgrade this building, you need another building of all levels. But in order for another building to have enough levels, you need a large amount of resources.
