I got just like the open place so they were seated immediately. Our server was a young man who was very... pleasant, but it was quite obvious they didn't have much experience. He explained the menu to us and the first error was that there are only two kinds of combo lunches, shrimp and fries or sleep and fries. Everything else is sold for pounds, which is kind of confusing as I don't know how much of a pound I can eat! I opted for the shrimp combo (I have no idea how much shrimp is served in the combo) and the sleep combo so that we could share and check out both. The shrimps came either pane or pel & eat. I chose Pel & East. In just a few minutes the server came out of the back with a plastic bag full of shrimp swimming in the marinade. This was plunked down on the table and I think he gathered from our expressions that we were doing now. He asked me if we wanted a pair of plastic gloves. I started with the shrimp and you have to wear a wet suit before you start. We continued until each of us had our shrimp fill. At this point came sleep and an order of fries. I'll say sleep was good, except that it was obvious that they were put in oil that wasn't hot enough as they had this kind of pasta look – not nice golden brown as it should have been. The fries were just fries. One disappointment was that there was no type of salad or slaw available - slaw slaw were an excellent part. I didn't expect it to be cheap and it wasn't. We eat quite often at Crab Pot and they have the same formula -- we throw everything in the middle of the table and eat with your fingers, but somehow you come from there feeling reasonable together. When I finished at the Shrimp Factory I felt I needed a shower. Between the lack of options on the menu, the irregular service, the mess and just good food, I would be hard pressed to get back. I thought it was a restaurant looking for a formula, but hadn't found it. I love seafood and really hope that they can turn the place into a place that calls me back.
