I surname (is) Lǐ, tree-kid Lǐ liberal. my last name is Lǐ, with him (tree) on top and zǐ (child) at the bottom In English there are ways to spell your name when necessary. Remember how many syllables are there in Chinese Pinyin? About 410, each has four tons. And how many characters are there? Over 5,000. There are some popular characters for people's names in Chinese, but when it comes to spoken Chinese, sometimes it's hard to know what characters you use for your name. So if you want to explain the characters of your name, there are two ways: First, you explain the character by pronouncing which components or elements or radicals are used in the character. For example 李 Lǐ Li is made of two components, the one on top is 木 mù wood, and the one at the bottom is 子 zǐ child. So, you say, 木子李 the character. 12th 我叫小龙, 大小的小, 龙舟的龙 pinyin. wǒ jiào Xiǎolóng, dà xiǎo de xiǎo, lóng zhōu de lóng – literally. I (himself) call Xiaolong, xiao da-xiao, a long-zhou liberal. my name is Xiaolong, xiao as in da-xiao (size), long as in long-zhou (dragon ship) Another way to explain the character is to say the most commonly used word that has this character as part of it. For example, here 小 xiǎo for small, you 大小的小, meaning xiao used in the word da-xiao (size). And for 龙 lóng dragon, you can say, 龙舟的龙, which means long (dragon) in the word long-zhou (dragon ship). We can do this because each Chinese word is usually two characters together. Psst... You can find our how to tell podcasts on Spotify too!
