University of Nebraska-Lincoln MEMORIAL STADIUM MEMORIAL STADIUM GAME DAY FAQ MEMORIAL STADIUM IMPORTANT LINKS MEMORIAL STADIUM One Memorial Stadium Lincoln, NE 68588 Ticket Info: (800) 8-BIGRED Built in 1923, Memorial Stadium was named in honor of all Nebraskans who have served in our Nation's wars. In 2006, an extra 6,500 seats brought the stadium to its current capacity of 81,067. The historic stadium also has one of the biggest replay screens in the nation, making the game day experience much more dramatic and exciting for Husker fans. In 2009, the Huskers home underwent another transformation with the addition of the Osborne Athletic Complex, which is connected to the northern end of the stadium, and includes new changing rooms, coaches' offices, an athletic health center, hydrotherapy pools, a nutrition center and a new power complex. With all this help for student-athletes, it's no wonder Nebraska continues consecutive home sell-outs, which is currently 311 games and counting. Written on four corners of the stadium are these words, wrote former UNL philosophy professor Hartley Burr Alexander: In memory of the men of Nebraska who served and fell in the wars of nations. Southwest: Not a victory, but an action; Not a goal, but a game; In a deed of glory. North West: Courage; Generosity; Justice; Honor; There are real awards for manly sport. Northeast: Their lives held the trust of their country; They have retained his faith; His heroes died. The stadium is also available to the public for excursions. Custom guided tours are available daily from 8:00-20:00, with limited access to the field, at gate 24 (when no teams practice). Download the brochure on the walking tour online or pick it up at Gate 20. MEMORIAL STADIUM GAME DAY FAQ: Here are some rules you need to know before visiting Memorial Stadium. On our memorial stadium tour in Lincoln, Neb., we noticed the Orange Bowl trophy from September 2, 1998, missing in the event of a trophy. The amazing thing is that no one from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln is too worried. That's because it's exactly where it should be: in the office of Husker head coach Scott Frost. We learned that and much more on the guided tour of Memorial Stadium. As the life of longtime Husker fans, we wish we had taken this opportunity sooner. The University of Nebraska offers free guided tours on Wednesdays and Thursdays. Each year, about 30,000 people take memorial stadium tours, half of them schoolchildren. To book a free experience, just call (402) 472-3333 to book a seat. Here's what you should expect (and watch out for) a guided tour. To have a Memorial Stadium tour in Lincoln Parking is limited around the stadium, even on non-game days. There is a measured lot south of the stadium where you can park. You can also use the garage across the street from West Stadium. After parking, head to the Traditions lobby of osborne's athletics complex, located in the northern stadium, to get back there. Be sure to call ahead to book a seat if you want guided tours of Memorial Stadium that are offered on Wednesdays and Thursdays. If you'd rather do a self-guided Memorial Stadium tour, you can go Monday to Friday at any time from 8 .m to 5 .m.. Keep in mind that you won't get to see some of the sights included in the guided tour unless you get one on your own. To get a glimpse of Osborne Field, pass gate 23A on the southeast corner of the stadium. Note that access to the field area is closed when or their opponents practice, or if there is a special event. Most photographed photographed on campus On our Memorial Stadium tour, we learned that it was becoming the third largest population center in Nebraska on the day of the game. With a capacity of nearly 90,000, only Omaha and Lincoln have more people at the time of the game. Memorial Stadium has a lot of visitors all year round as well. This is so popular, in fact, that our guide tells us at the start of our tour that the two most photographed places on campus are in the stadium. The number one photo op is the Legacy Statue on the east side of the stadium outside Gate 20. Created by artist Fred Hoppe, it commemorates Nebraska's five national championships and depicts five Husker defensive players tackling a ball carrier. The second most popular place to take pictures? A statue of former Nebraska head football coach Tom Osborne standing alongside a former quarterback, Brook Berringer. Our guide told us humble coach Osborne initially didn't want a statue of himself placed there. However, after seeing a sketch of himself coaching the late Brook Berringer, who tragically died in a plane crash just after his senior season, Osborne agreed. We're so glad he did. We're sure the third statue, one of former Husker coach Bob Devaney near Gate 20 on the east side, will get a lot of snaps, too. It seems that those national championship trophies are fragile Once inside the lobby tradition door, you will see a display with five Nebraska national championship trophies. The Huskers won NCAA Division I championships in 1970, 1971, 1994, 1995 and 1997. We want to emphasize that Nebraska footballs (which are not permanently attached to trophies) have never been dropped. But our guide shared with us the story of the father of an Alabama player who had an argument with one of them. The football fell to the ground and smashed to pieces. It turned out that a spare crystal football cost $35,000. But someone in Alabama had a good idea. They picked up the pieces and sold them individually to fans for more than $50,000 - more than enough for a new crystal football and then some. There's more than one Heisman trophy every year we learn on our Memorial Stadium tour that when a player wins the Heisman trophy, there are actually three awarded. The first goes to the player, the second stays in New York, and the third goes to the player's university. For this reason, just opposite the national championship trophies you will find three real Heisman trophies won by Johnny Jet Rogers (1972), Mike Rozier (1983), and Eric Crouch (2001). Only four schools had multiple Heisman Trophy winners. All are enclosed in a glass case near the staircase, so getting a good picture of them is not easy. See the world's longest telegram at Memorial Stadium The Traditions Lobby Full of huskers memorabilia that you'll want to try. There are bowl game trophies, conference championship plaques, and newspaper clippings of many of the greatest moments in husker football history. Be sure to search for the world's longest telegram on display there. It seems that at the end of the 1970 season, players headed to the Orange Bowl to face off against LSU with a national title on the line. Back in Nebraska, 46,500 people who couldn't attend the game in person each paid $1 to help send a short message of good luck. Each participant then got to sign it or his name on the telegram. The result was the longest telegram in history that was delivered to a locker room in Nebraska shortly before kickoff. The telegram message was just three words: Good luck, Cornhuskers. The final score of the game? Nebraska 17, LSU 12. Big Red brought home its first national championship this year. Memorial Stadium in Lincoln: home to the biggest fans in college football Everyone who attends the game quickly realizes that there is something special about the experience at Memorial Stadium in Lincoln. In fact, etched through the door of the stadium you will find the words: Through these gates pass the biggest fans in college football. In lobby traditions, there's a huge mural dedicated to fans who hold the record for the longest sellout streak in college football. Husker believers have purchased every ticket for every single game since 1962. And it's not that it's a simple record; the stadium has about 90,000 people. By the way, the closest team sellout streak is about 70 games (or 10 years!) in a row. Touch the lucky undertones Nebraska fans all recognize the iconic chock that hangs just in front of the Huskers' locker room. Before each game, players and coaches alike reach out and touch the undersue for good luck. What you may not know is that the ock tradition dates back at least to the 1930s. Since then, it has been part of every match day, moving to a place near every locker room the team has had over the years. He even travels with the team to road games. What else you'll see on the parade at Memorial Stadium in the Lincoln Weight Room (but through the glass door) - Former Husker All-American Ndamukong Suh has given $2 million to help build a state-of-the-art mass soccer space for husker football. After learning how Nebraska pioneered strength training in football, look inside and see how far the strength and conditioning program has come. Corridors - Along the walls in the football complex, you will find corridors full of husker football memories, records and statistics. Take your time and look at photos of past team captains, see all-time statistical leaders for different categories, and take into pictures of the consensus of Nebraska Football All-Americans. Tunnel walk videos Part of the visit, you'll stop by a small theater and take in a movie from a pregame walking tunnel. Tunnel walk/field/practice facilities – These stops are included on the Memorial Stadium parade in Lincoln if no practice or event takes place. What you won't see Old Tunnel Walk - Before the completion of the current football complex, Nebraska's locker room was at South Stadium. Husker fans donated money to bricks to serve as a kind of red carpet for the journey the team took from locker room to field. When the dressing room moved to North Sadium, bricks didn't. We learned that the visiting team now uses Nebraska's old locker room, but the special bricks are tied up and the opponent is pursuing a different path to the field. Façade of the old stadium – With the completion of the extension of the stadium, the original facades of the stadium were covered by new construction. While visible inside the expanded area on game day, facades are not included in the show. Dressing room - For safety reasons, no dressing room is included in the room rate.
