Movie novel comparison worksheet

Watching a movie after reading the book is a great way to encourage students to think critically about how each environment presents roughly the same information. Here are a few questions: Consider setting up the book. Did the setting in the movie look like you were imagining it? (Good for this are the Harry Potter, The Holes series, the Chronicles of Narnia and Where the Wild Things Are.) If not, how was it different? Think of the protagonist. How was it different from what you imagined? How was it? Are there any changes in the characters between the book and the movie? Why do you think the people who made the film will back off or add a character? What parts are in the book, but they weren't in the movie? Why did the people who made the movie forget these parts? Were there parts of the movie that weren't in the book? Why do you think the people who made the movie added these parts? Do you think the people who made the film played a good role in the depiction of the book? Why or why not? What did you like better: the book or the movie? Why? Here is a free worksheet with some of the questions above. Also: the brains of all the ways in which the film is different from the book. Make a Wen diagram using one circle for the book and one for the movie. Discuss a book that isn't made into a movie — what are the challenges? What do you want to leave behind? Who would throw for every hero? For fun (and mastery), list all the books you can imagine that are made in movies. Take these book vs movie questions cards. Fun fact: Roald Dahl, author of Charlie and the Chocolate Factory, hated the 1971 film version of his book so much that he refused to let the studio do a sequel. His widow (Dahl died in 1990) allowed Warner Bros. to make the 2005 version. Not only did she love the film, she was sure her late husband too.
