I was lucky that just one day before the outbreak of the Intifada I went to Gaza to live with my parents thinking that I can work on my thesis from there. This was a really interesting book. Probably the best contemporary Arabic book that I have ever read concerning this topic. Sharon and My Mother-In-Law: Ramallah Diaries wondered if the officers knew that I, like many other Palestinians living in the Occupied Territories, needed many types of permits to move about: a permit to enter Jerusalem, another to go out to Jordan, a third to enter Israel, a fourth to work in Israel, Sharon and My Mother-In-Law: Ramallah Diaries impossible one to enter Gaza, and a four-hour permit to use the airport, which gives you Sharon and My Mother-In-Law: Ramallah Diaries enough time to get there with no flat tires, lasamahallah God forbid. It's an art to write amidst conflict zones in a very humorous way making fun of all situations that might be funny to the reader as the absurdity of the picture comes into the mind but it is of course not funny especially for those who have lived throughout these days in constant agony of the situation that is yet ignored by many westernised countries who suppose that such matters will be cleared on their own without any intervention. The situation there was like this gray fuzzy thing that the local news glazed over and always painted the Israel side as the "virtuous" aside rather than showing what it really is.
