

Are we responsible or are we selfish?

The consequence of creating life - if that life is "not wanted" - is to destroy life with abortion. Can we be responsible for our activity so that all lives can be wanted and protected?

Abortion is a selfish choice.

Abortion on demand is supplied for any reason - reasons which are selfish when weighed against the absolute value of life. Is it a "right" or a degradation of women and men, to say that they have no responsibility for the most precious of all things, human life?

Abortion Encourages Irresponsibility

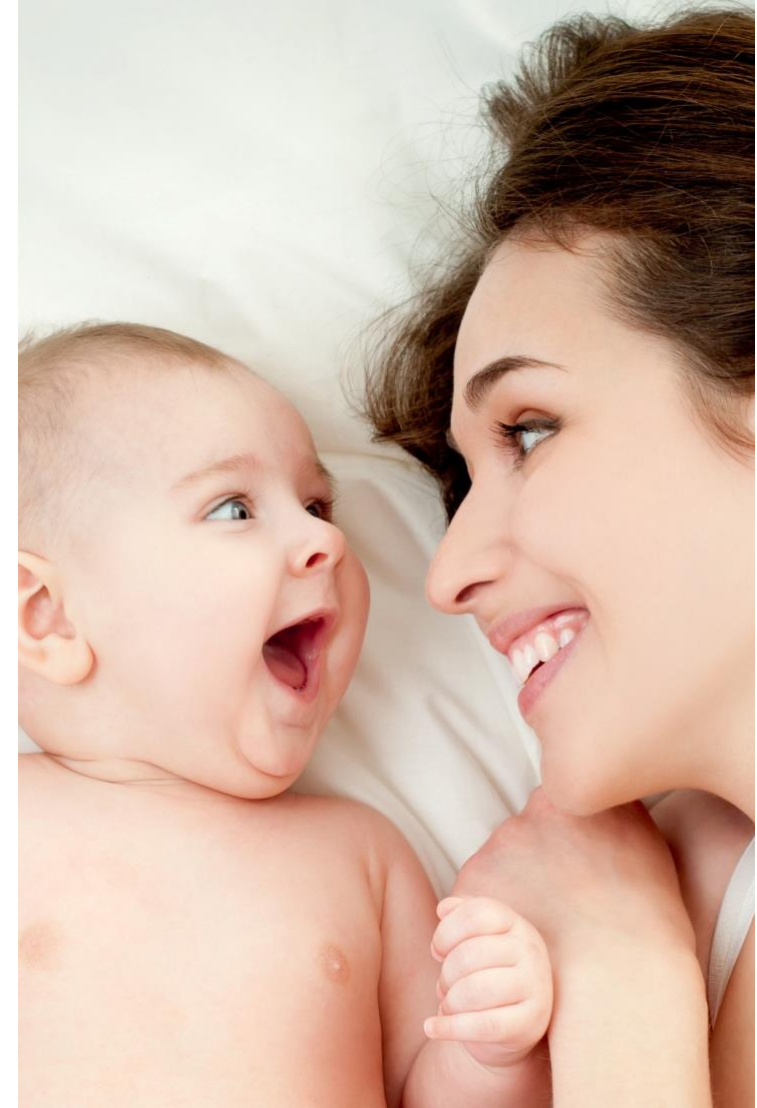

Abortion on demand is "damage control" and a so-called "safety net" for uncommitted relationships, which it encourages. It only serves to weaken relationships and communities. Nowhere has it caused more harm than in poor and ethnic communities.

An Election to Save America

There is a crucial issue at stake for all Americans. It has to do with the killing of babies right up to birth and even after they have been born. The decision Americans will make in this election will affect not only babies but the character of our nation, who we are, and what we believe.

Save one life, save a whole world.

WHAT IS THE FRAMEWORK OF OUR VALUES?

The 1973 Supreme Court Roe v. Wade decision ushered in abortion for any reason. This was because it saw unborn babies as non-persons, because they were passive and dependent existences. It made abortion on demand available nationwide.

Some Rights are WRONG

In 1991, the United States Congress in a joint Resolution of both Houses affirmed that the United States is based on seven great biblical laws called the Seven Laws of Noah. These are named after the survivor of the Flood, Noah and his descendants - all humanity - with whom the Creator established a covenant based on these laws, upon which civilization would be established.

HUMANITY AT RISK

Among these laws was a prohibition of killing, which includes abortion, except where it is required to save the life of the mother. In Roe v. Wade, the majority on the Supreme Court ignored the framework of these universal principles which prohibit abortion on demand as forbidden killing.

Will our society reaffirm these universal values or not?

The universal principles of the Noahide laws give unborn life an absolute value because life - even though it is passive and dependent - has a soul made in the image of its Creator. So it has absolute value even though it is passive and dependent. Life must be protected.

Are We CRUEL or are we COMPASSIONATE?

Joe Biden and Kamala Harris want to make federal laws forcing all 50 states to allow a baby to be killed up to seconds before its birth. This often involves crushing the baby's skull or dismembering its limbs. They also supported a bill to allow babies that survive abortion to be left to die.

Biden and Harris portray abortion as an act of compassion. Those who have compassion for cruelty will end up being cruel to those who need compassion.

Does life have absolute value or not?

There are other lives which are passive and dependent: The life of a child born with disability and the life of an adult in a coma or with a terminal illness. The thinking of the Supreme Court in Roe v. Wade opens the way to killing those with disabilities, because it gives no absolute value to human life.
